GRAND ARMY BOYS

They Are Gathering at the National Capital.

The White House, for the First Time in History,

Is Covered With Bunting and Flowers,

And the Pension Building is a Blaze of Glory.

Vice President Morton Takes the President's Place and Delivers a Splendid Address to the Veterans.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Once again Washington is invested with an army. But to-day it is the call of peace and brotherhood that has summoned the boys in blue to the national capital, and they gather not to repel an invading army as they did thirty years ago, but to perpetuate the memory of their dead and to renew for a brief period the ties that joined them during four years of hardship and danger.

The citizens of Washington will extend them a hearty welcome the coming week and nothing that money and forethought can procure will be lacking to make the 26th annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic the most memorable gathering in the history of the organization.

It is estimated that fully a quarter of a million of visitors have arrived during the past three days, and the city presents an appearance that is only equaled by the great gatherings that witness the presidential inaugurations every four years.

The decorations are the most magnificent that Washington has ever seen.

The White House itself, for the first time since it was built, is gayly decorated, over four thousand yards of bunting having been used for this purpose.

One of the most striking features is the floral display on the grounds of the Pension office. The centerpiece is a mammoth reproduction of the badge of the G. A. R., flanked on either side by likeness of the badge of the Loyal Legion and of the Women's Relief Corps. Above the trio of badges is a semi-circle of letters a yard high forming the words "Welcome, Grand Army of the Republic."

The display east of the fountain is very similar except that it is made up of the badges of the Union Veterans' Union, and the emblems of the National Organization of Union Sailors and Sons of Veterans.

The first feature of the ground decorations that will attract the attention of the veterans when the grand parade approaches the pension building to-morrow will be the emblems of the different army corps, which have been arranged in a long row.

The famous White House just south of the executive mansion has been converted into a vast camp with headquarters for every corps and brigade, and a large tent for reunions.

A complete model of the Kearsarge has also been erected in this place and will be the chief attraction for the middies, who held their reunion in Baltimore last week.

The formal opening of the encampment will be the dedication of these grounds late this afternoon, and henceforth they will be known as Grand Army Place.

The most brilliant social event of the week will be the reception to be tendered to the members of the G. A. R. in the [illegible] of the Army [illegible] preparations for this entertainment have been under the management of Mrs. John A. Logan, and the event will mark something of an epoch in the history of Washington society as it is the first occasion on record that the rotunda of the capitol has been used for a reception.

Mrs. Logan will be assisted in receiving by Mrs. Morton, the ladies of the cabinet, possibly by Mrs. E. S. Grant, Miss Clara Barton. Mrs. Harrison's absence during the festivities of the week is a source of universal regret, and expressions of sympathy are heard on every hand.

Sheridan posts from all over the country will unite to-night in doing honor to the memory of the late general. The speakers will be as follows: Col. G. C. Kniffin, Gen. Cyrus Bussey, Gen. Charles F. Manderson, Col. W. P. Hepburn, Gen. L. A. Grant, Mr. John Tweedale and Andrew Davidson.

WITH GOOD WEATHER

The Grand Army Week Has Opened in Washington.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Grand Army week opened fair and cool with every apparent indication of a continuance of good weather during the exercises and celebrations in connection with the national encampment.

All through the night the streets were alive with marching men. G. A. R. posts and their friends, on their way from railroad stations to quarters. Despite all the exertions that the railroad companies made to handle the crowds promptly, the visitors were from two to twelve hours late in reaching the city; but as rapidly as possible the trains are rolling into the city and unloading their human freight.

The passengers accept the situation with the best possible grace, and whatever the measure of their discontent it is all dissipated upon arriving at the capital as they look upon the generous and artistic manifestations of welcome and find themselves surrounded with reminiscences of the war and in the society of those whose friendship was knit in the blood and smoke of battle.

Despite all delays it is believed that every one who is bound for the encampment and reunion will reach the city in time to witness the great parade to-morrow.

Among the notable arrivals was that of the famous Sixth Massachusetts, the first to respond to President Lincoln's call for troops. En route to Washington, they were fired upon in Baltimore April 19, and spilled the first blood after the assault upon Fort Sumter.

Several hundred men are present with the command, and as they marched up the avenue late last night, with their tattered flag at the head of the column, they were greeted with cheer upon cheer all along the route until their quarters were reached.

Detroit post, whose membership is limited to 150 also came in last night. Senior Vice Commander H. M. Duffield and General Alger are members. They came by special vestibuled trains to the capital, making faster time than the regular eastbound limited. The post has a gigantic color bearer in the person of C. W. Reynolds, who served in a New Hampshire regiment. He is six feet three inches high, and weighs nearly three hundred pounds.

Distinguished visitors are abundant—Ex-President Hayes, Major Generals Howard, Miles and Brooks, and General B. F. Butler are prominent among them.

A pilgrimage to old Camp Stoneman, near Geisboro Point, nearly opposite Alexandria, will be made by the survivors of the First New York volunteers, (Elsworth Zouaves), First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Seventh, and Eighth United States cavalry, who were encamped there during the stirring days in the sixties.

The palm for decorations must be awarded to the government printing office. The display of bunting which is out about that dingy old structure, which shelters 2,600 employes of Uncle Sam, is somewhat marvelous.

For completeness and ingenuity, its like has never been seen in the city. It is the result of labor which has been expended during the noon hours and after work on a week past by the employes themselves. Each division endeavored to outdo its neighbors, until no possible opportunity for a display of the red, white and blue remained. The exterior of the building is festooned with great clusters of red, white and blue and national flags, gathered in points at the eaves and sweeping over the doors. The mammoth design over the north capitol entrance is particularly imposing. Inside there is enough bunting to decorate a city.

The first formal ceremony of the day was "handshaking" among the crew on board the "Kearsarge" on Grand Army place. The ship was full-rigged, a line of gay colored bunting floating from tem to stern over the top of the spars. No other object on the place is so generally admired as the "Kearsarge," and the proudest man in sight is Major Michael, whose conception the ship was.

Among the survivors of the crew of the Kearsarge present are Philip Weeks, who was a maintopman, who, during the historic fight, served on the 11-inch pivot gun; Charles Bowen, a foretopman; Frank Cook, captain of the Afterguard, and Jas. Gee. Others are Boatswain's Mate Michael B. Drewry, Chief Boatswain's Mate John H. Bons, Fireman Michael C. Cody, Lawrence C. Crowley and John C. Hays.

J. B. Baker, a skilled workman at the navy yard, who superintended the construction of the ship as she stands, was also one of the crew. The spar deck is of two-inch pine and the inner lining of her sides above that deck is of inch pine. The masts are bolted to massive timbers stepped in boxes sunk six feet in the ground. The rigging is of the strongest kind and is placed and "rattled down" precisely as on any seagoing bark-rigged vessel.

Everything from stem to stern is built as strongly as braces and nails could make it. Some few of the minor appointments of the old vessel, such as hatches, combings and the like, are left off purposely in order to make room for sittings, promenades and dancing. The deck is marked, however, to show the location and size of the hatches and tracks of the swivel guns.

Two breech loading guns point out of the forward port holes, which will be used for saluting purposes and to "fire down" the ensign at sundown.

The cabin is 16x40 feet and is nicely finished.

The walls are in imitation of paint and the ceiling is covered and decorated handsomely with new flags. Around the walls are models of vessels representing the old and new navy. Pictures of naval vessels and naval heroes are placed here and there so as to make the effect intensely naval, unique and interesting. The model of a finely drawn vessel stands on a table on pedestals, with a basin one inch deep nicely adjusted for cut flowers. Three models of war ships of elaborate design are artistically displayed and form most interesting object lessons to those not accustomed to seeing such artisanship.

The furnishings of the cabin are substantial and elegant from the carpet to the bric-a-brac. The furnishings in silver are really handsome and appropriate. All of the silver has the name Kearsarge engraved upon it.

SPEECHES AND MUSIC.

Appropriate Dedicatory Ceremonies —Message From President Harrison.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Preliminary to the festivities of the week was the dedication of Grand Army place, located on the famous White lot just south of the white house grounds. This place grew up under the inspiration of the suggestion of Comrade John McElroy, editor of the National Tribune, that some central point should be provided and furnished where the old veterans might meet their associates of the war. This finally expanded into the place of reunions as it will be carried out on Grand Army place. The plaza surrounding the flag tower where the dedicatory exercises were held was crowded to its utmost capacity before noon—the hour fixed upon for the event. After the vice president and commander-in-chief were escorted to their places on the stand from the reviewing stand where they saw the parade. The fifteen hundred seats on the platform were occupied by prominent G. A. R. and W. R. C. officers and government officials—a most distinguished gathering.

The assembly call on the bugle secured partial order and the Marine band played a national air, after which Comrade McElroy formally called the assemblage to order and introduced Rev. S. B. Paine, D. D., of Ocean Grove, N. J., chaplain-in-chief, who delivered the dedicatory prayer.

Another air by the Marine band followed and then Commander-in-Chief Palmer made the introductory address. As he rose to the platform the old soldiers gave him a most affectionate greeting. He spoke as follows:

Palmer Talks.

"Comrades—For the first time since the close of the great civil conflict you will have an opportunity of meeting your comrades in arms in a headquarters provided for each of the great army corps that existed during the war. It would certainly be invidious of me to single out or attempt to mention any particular corps for its gallant service. I know that human nature on the average is about alike, and I can appreciate how every soldier took special delight in speaking with pride of the service rendered by the corps in which he served, and no will object if when you get together to-day the recollections of past dangers tempt you to be enthusiastic. I have often heard the boys say:

"My corps won the fight in some particular contest," but you must bear in mind that a large number of the 'boys' who were on the other side will mingle and it is very likely that they will have with you during your visit in Washington some recollection of what occurred from 1861 to '65. Whatever differences of opinion we may have as to the gallantry of the several corps, there is one point upon which we all agree, that whether it was the comrade who wore the star or the eagle, whether it was he who wore the insignia of a non-commissioned officer or the common soldier who carried his musket in the ranks, each was loyal to the common cause for which he served and each tried to do his full duty as he saw it. The same can be said for each corps and its gallant commander, each did its full share in the contest and each shared in the glorious achievements of the union army.

"The thought that so many of our gallant leaders cannot be with us to-day fills our hearts with many sad reflections. They would respond cheerfully at the call of friendship as they did in 1861 to the call of duty. The vacant places they have left in our ranks are more suggestive than the presence of the living and if they are not with us to-day it is because other glories are reserved for them, while we are left with others to enjoy the fruits of their great labors.

"To-day you will meet and look into the faces of comrades you have not seen for years. You will take each other by the hand and recall the scenes and incidents through which you have passed and repeat the story of how the battle was won. I congratulate for you the committee who have had this grand work in charge. I know you will enjoy and appreciate the results of labor they have so generously given for your pleasure. You will once more meet and touch elbow again with the comrades who helped to add to the fame of your respective corps. And now, comrades, I know you will share my feelings of profound regret over the circumstances which caused the absence of one whom you would have delighted to see and hear, and who had anticipated joining you in all the festivities of the week, a comrade whose gallant services to the nation in the hour of peril has been supplemented by his wise and patriotic management of the affairs of this great republic in time of peace—Comrade Benjamin Harrison.

"I now take great pleasure in introducing the Hon. Levi P. Morton, vice-president of the United States."

Before introducing the vice-president, General Palmer read a telegram from President Harrison, received this morning from Loon Lake, in answer to one sent by him, expressing his regret and sympathy, in which the president said:

"I looked forward with much interest to the great rehearsal in Washington next Tuesday of the victors' march of 1865. I would have esteemed it one of the highest honors of my public life to have welcomed to the national capital and to have received on its historic avenue this representative assembly of the men who not only saved the city from threatened destruction but made it the worthy political of an unbroken union.

It would also have been one of the most favored and tender incidents of my private life to have taken these comrades by the hand, but all this has been denied me by the intervention of a sad and imperative duty and I can only ask you to give all my cordial greeting and good wishes. Accept my sincere thanks for your very kind and sympathetic message."

Vice President Morton's Speech.

The reference to President Harrison was the signal for enthusiastic cheering which lasted some time. The demonstration was a striking tribute to the soldier-president and man. Vice President Morton was warmly received as he rose.

VICE PRESIDENT MORTON.

He Takes the Place of the President on the Platform.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Vice President Morton spoke as follows:

"Soldiers and sailors of the Grand Army of the Republic: A sorrow that brings us all together, calls me to take the place, in these ceremonies, of the president to whom you would instinctively turn, as a comrade, and as commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States.

"While we need his high resolve and inflexible will in defense of the people from an insidious foe, now that he is standing at the bedside of one dearer to him than life we may not forget what he owes to the tenderest relation of humanity, and a chord of affectionate sympathy reaches him from every hamlet and home in the land. God give him grace in this hour of need.

"I see before me the survivors of a generation of men who have emblazoned the pages of history and freedom for all times to come; who have set the example for republican France, for united Germany, and reconstructed Italy, and who have broadened and deepened the foundations of the English constitution and of Anglo-Saxon liberty. Of this great army of liberty, whether they have passed away or are still present for duty, you are the honored representatives.

"The president would speak to you as a comrade. It is for me to greet you in behalf of business interests affecting the welfare of the whole people, in behalf of trade and commerce, of the husbandman and artisan, of the employer and employed; in behalf of all men and women from every section who love the union.

"I bid you welcome in behalf of the president and his cabinet advisers; in behalf of the congress of the United States and the national judiciary, administering collectively the government you have secured and in behalf of a whole people made illustrious by your adversaries, now your friends.

"I greet you in behalf of a stalwart north, and a loyal south—of a sun-illumined east, and commanding west under the shadows of the capital you have preserved in this beautiful city founded by Washington and made sacred services and sufferings of Lincoln and in full view of Virginia, the birthplace of presidents, and the burial place of heroes.

"Your march to-day and to-morrow will recall to you, as it will to us, the great review when Grant ranged himself by the side of the president of the United States, when Meade saluted for the veterans of the east, and Sherman for those of the west, and when the light that fell upon the dome of the capitol was flashed back from the sword of Sheridan.

"There are brilliant illustrations of your prowess, still leading your ranks, or among them, and I wish that I could summon them all; but the glories of the battle names recall them with vivid personality.

"In the order of time this may or may not be your last review, but I express the hope of a grateful people that heaven will bounteously lengthen out your lives before you are called to the other shore to join the ranks of your companions.

"And now, my countrymen, I dedicate this "Grand Army place," and the commemorative memorials which it is believed will be hereafter erected upon it, to the everlasting glories of the Grand Army of the Republic.

"God bless you all, and those who to-day unite with you in strengthening the union of the great republic."

The flag on the staff 150 feet overhead was then unfurled and saluted by a park of artillery. With the "Star Spangled Banner" by the marine band the dedication of Grand Army Place was complete and thousands of comrades dispersed.

The committee of the Commercial club, Indianapolis, which is charged with the duty of laboring to secure the next national encampment at that city, reached here this morning, 12 hours late. They were preceded by Gov. Chase and Col. I. N. Walker, both ex-department commanders. Their labors, it is believed, will not be very onerous, in view of the assurances already given to the representatives of Indianapolis previously on the field.

Promises of support were given yesterday which practically settled the fact that the national encampment will go to Indianapolis in 1893.

Except to receive a complimentary vote it is not expected that any other city will be named.

TO GO TO WASHINGTON

Mrs. Harrison to Return to Her Home.

No Unfavorable Symptoms in Her Condition.

The Invalid, If Nothing Happens to Change the Program, Will be at the Capital on Wednesday.

Loon Lake, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Notwithstanding dreary, rainy weather the condition of Mrs. Harrison is improved this morning. She passed a comfortable night.

A cold rain began falling over Loon Lake shortly after midnight and it continued steadily until early this morning. The sudden change in the temperature excited some apprehension as to whether it would have any effect on the condition of Mrs. Harrison. But when Dr. Gardner came over to the hotel for breakfast he reported that his patient was better and stronger, having passed a comfortable and restful night.

According to the statement of those about her there is little in Mrs. Harrison's present condition to excite serious apprehension.

With the non-appearance of the dreaded watery accumulation hope is revived in the hearts of the patient and the members of her family and the suggestion that she be removed to Washington will be carried out. She will probably be removed to-morrow.

A consultation was held this morning between Drs. Gardner and Trudeau and it was decided to grant the wish of the president, his family and Mrs. Harrison herself that she be taken back to Washington.

The removal, it is now definitely stated, will take place to-morrow and the train having the distinguished invalid aboard will be due in Washington Wednesday morning. Shortly after the consultation Dr. Gardner made the following statement to the United Press reporter:

"Mrs. Harrison, if everything is favorable, is to be removed to Washington to-morrow. She has expressed a strong desire to be taken back to the White House and the president and other members of the family are also anxious that she should be taken there if the removal can be accomplished with any degree of safety. Dr. Trudeau has been here this morning and we have had a consultation. We find that Mrs. Harrison is much improved.

"There has been no reproduction of the fluid to any extent and in view of the fact that the members of the family wish to move the patient to Washington she will be removed, because in two or three days she may not be able to be taken away, as the fluid is liable to be reproduced at any time. She passed a very comfortable night and is feeling much stronger this morning.

TWENTY-TWO YEARS.

Alexander Berkman, the Would Be Assassin,

Will Have Time to Meditate Over His Deeds.

The Court Weighed His Case and Made the Punishment Fit the Crime.

Pittsburg, Sept. 19.—Alexander Berkman, the would-be assassin of Chairman H. C. Frick, of the Carnegie company, has just been convicted by the jury and sentenced to 22 years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

CINCINNATI IN A WRECK.

NEWS OF THE CHOLERA

German Sugar Will Be Barred Out

If Found to Contain Disease Germs.

Reported Case on the Bohemia—Reports From All Over the World.

Quarantine, 11:45—The yellow flags on the Scandia and Bohemia have been taken down. They were hoisted this morning.

New York, Sept. 19.—A special to the Herald from Washington says a letter will be written by the department officials this week stating the government's position on the question of admitting American citizens who may come in the steerage from Europe.

Gen. Spaulding, who gave the information, also stated if the medical experts had reason to believe that cholera germs were conveyed to this country in the sugar importations from Germany, the product certainly would be excluded.

No action would be taken by the treasury officials, he added, until complaint had been made to them regarding the German sugar.

New York, Sept. 19.—John Knox, 41 years old, a fireman on the Allan State Line steamer State of Nevada, which left Glasgow September 2, and arrived here on September 14, was found dead on the deck of the steamer near one of the hatchways at 1 o'clock last evening. The man had complained of a bad attack of diarrhoea early in the morning, and when he was discovered dead on the deck, Capt. Maine at once notified the health authorities, fearing that Knox might have been the victim of cholera.

A policeman was despatched for Dr. Roberts, chief of the bureau of contagious diseases, who arrived at the steamer, whis is lying at her pier at the foot of West Twenty-third street, North river, at 7:30. After making an examination, he ordered the steamer thoroughly fumigated and also closed the pier and quarantined those on the ship. The Nevada was not detained at quarantine last Wednesday, having exhibited a clean bill of health.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 19.—A pastoral letter was read yesterday in all Roman Catholic churches of the archdiocese of Ottawa urging co-operation with the authorities in preventing a cholera outbreak and enjoining fasting and self-mortification with the hope that the epidemic may be staid. It also directs that the fiftieth Psalm, Miserciere, be sung after the benediction service and a special prayer of intercession be recited after every low mass.

The cholera scare is abating.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—Yesterday afternoon the steamship Wandrahm, of the Hamburg-American line, sailed into port carrying the yellow flag. She was signalled to anchor. Upon being boarded she was found to have a clean bill of health from the Gross Isle station. She was not allowed to land, however, Dr. Lachpelle, inspector of the provincial board, giving as the reason that she had to be stayed the necessary 10 days. An examination will be made.

New York, Sept. 19.—Arrived—Cambria from Huelva, Furnessia from Glasgow.

Quarantine, Sept. 19.—The steamships still anchored in lower quarantine are the Moravia, Normannia, Scandia, Bohemia, and Heligoland. In upper quarantine are the La Bretagne, Norde, Suevia, Rugia, Washington City, Cambria and Furnessia. The Wyoming remains at anchor in Gravesend bay.

Panama, Sept. 19.—A telegram from San Salvador states that a death from cholera has occurred at La Libertad on the Pacific coast of the republic and a short distance from the capital. The victim of the disease was a nun, recently arrived from Europe.

Havre, Sept. 19.—There were four deaths from cholera in this city on Sunday and nine new cases of the disease.

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 19.—A case of suspected cholera is in the hospital here. John Cusick, a Pole, employed in some chemical works on Staten Island sound, was admitted to the hospital here yesterday afternoon suffering from what the physicians are inclined to think is Asiatic cholera. This morning the hospital authorities telegraphed to the New York board of health to send a cholera expert to diagnose the case.

All the nurses and patients in the hospital who were able to move left the building this morning in a fright.

The hospital will be quarantined.

RUNNING THE BLOCKADE.

Greater Vigilance Necessary Along the Canadian Border.

Detroit, Sept. 19.—Immigrants have begun blockade running. To pass Detroit without a proper certificate is impossible, and they are now swarming into the United States by means of small boats at outlying towns, and nothing short of an absolute river patrol night and day will stop them. Eleven immigrants crossed the river at Wyandotte Wednesday night under cover of the darkness in two small boats, and the entire lot left Wyandotte on the 10 o'clock train. The customs house officials learned of the stolen march after the birds had flown, and reported the case to the Wyandotte health officers. Means were taken at once to thoroughly investigate the case, but the utmost vigilance has failed to discover a clew. The immigrants were of the better class. Since then night patrolmen have been instructed to devote most of their watch to the river bank. At Marine City a batch of immigrants got across recently. They had no quarantine certificates, and were taken before the mayor. The mayor is a physician, and he examined them and allowed them to cross the river.

AN EPIDEMIC OF DISINFECTION

Even Worse than Cholera Itself is Afflicting Germany Just Now.

London, Sept. 19.—The Times to-day publishes another letter of its series on cholera, written by well known physicians who are studying the disease in Russia and Germany. To-day's letter describes the inspection and disinfection craze in Germany. The writer says that inspection and disinfection have become epidemic, and, while being ineffective to prevent the disease, are not less harmful in their effects than cholera itself. Every frontier town, village and hamlet bristles with impossible regulations which the local officials interpret according to their own views. Matters are carried on to such a pitch that in many cases the imperial health officer has been obliged to interfere and issue fairly reasonable regulations to check the misdirected zeal of the local authorities.

The whole movement, the writer adds, is the work of the German press, which rushed into a frenzy of excitement over the epidemic in Hamburg. Lurid telegrams were printed, embodying all street gossip and equally valuable information. Not a single local journalist has entered a cholera hospital in Hamburg or has seen what he intended to describe. Abuse of the town authorities was indulged in, and hysterical demands for all sorts of measures were made. Sensationalism, malevolence and ignorance have been the materials employed to guide public opinion. No wonder, he says, that every local authority was quaking and felt compelled to brace itself up to a tremendous state of violence.

The Times this morning publishes the first of a series of articles by Hall Caine, describing a tour in western Russia and Galicia. The writer says that when he left Berlin two months ago Karl Franzos, knowing that he would return via Hamburg, warned him that Hamburg was the worst cholera bed in Europe, and that he should quit the city instantly if a single case was reported. Mr. Caine adds that when he returned to Hamburg the epidemic had already appeared, but no precautions had been taken except at the excellent barracks for Hebrew emigrants on the American quay.

Milan, Tenn., Sept. 18.—News reached here last night from Mayfield, Ky., that a russian immigrant had been stricken on the street with a disease supposed to be Asiatic cholera. The patient was taken to a vacant house and a quarantine established.

New York, Sept. 19.—The 3 o'clock p. m. bulletin of the health board says:

"No cholera has appeared in this city since last bulletin."

Baltimore, Sept. 19.—Another cholera story was exploded this morning by the arrival at her dock of the Johnson line steamer Baltimore, which had been detained at quarantine flying the yellow flag since Saturday. The suspected case proved to be simple diarrhoea.

London, Sept. 19.—The steamer Uranus, which arrived at Hull from Hamburg, was duly examined by the health authorities of Hull and pronounced free from infection. Thereupon the vessel was admitted last evening to its dock to unload. The unloading was going on to-day when one of the firemen of the Uranus was taken suddenly ill with every symptom of cholera. He was at once removed to the fever hospital where a careful diagnosis left no doubt that the case was Asiatic cholera, which had remained latent during the short voyage from Hamburg. The unloading of the Uranus was stopped and the steamer was put in quarantine.

THE DEAD UNBURIED.

Terrible State of Affairs in the Cincinnati Morgue.

Cincinnati, Sept. 19.—When cholera appeared in New York the sexton of the potters' field notified the authorities he would bury no more bodies and refused to surrender the keys until paid a considerable sum due. At the same time Undertaker Rebold issued a like manifesto. As a result the dead in the morgue are unburied and the stench is something awful, for no one will buy ice or disinfectants.

THE ODD FELLOWS.

Sovereign Grand Lodge in Session.

A Great Week on the Pacific Coast.

The City Arrayed in Splendor to Honor the Guests—Annual Reports.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 19.—The sixty-eighth annual communication of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the week's session of the sovereign grand lodge opened here to-day.

The gathering is larger than any previously entertained by the citizens of Portland, but notwithstanding that there are in the neighborhood of 20,000 members of the order in the city besides a large number of visitors, everybody is being housed and fed with difficulty.

Most of the visitors have occupied from ten days to two weeks on the journey, making numerous stops en route to view the scenery.

During the past year more of the large gatherings, religious, political and fraternal, have been held west of the Mississippi river than ever before and the people of Portland are entertaining their visitors in a way that is likely to still further popularize the westward movement.

The city is arrayed in bunting from one end to the other, and every other man in town is on some kind of an entertainment. The first session of the supreme grand lodge was held his afternoon, and the proceedings were opened by the reading of the year's report of Grand Sire Charles M. Busbee, of Raleigh, N. C.

The report showed the greatest gain in membership in 1891 that has ever been made in one year of the order's history. The net increase in membership from January 1, 1891, to January 1, 1892, was 48,807. The membership in good standing on the first of last January reached the enormous total of 721,146, and including the membership of Rebekah degree lodges 802,881.

The expenditures for relief during 1891 were $3,116,182.08. The report shows lodge members, 721,146; encampment members, 124,553; Rebekah degree members, 155,015; aggregate relief by lodges and encampments, $3,142,131.80; relief by Rebekah lodges, $35,520.18; total revenue, $7,956,064.48, being an increase for the year in revenue of $220,138.42. The growth of the order since its foundation has been remarkable.

The first lodge, known as Washington lodge, No. 1, was founded in Baltimore in 1819. From 1830 to 1892, 2,000,000 members were initiated. It has spread from the United States and Canada until now there is a flourishing membership in Australia, England, India and Germany. In this country there are 12,000 lodges and encampments. Once in three years the Patriarchs Militant meet in grand encampments. The last was in Chicago in 1890, and the next will be in that city in 1893.

KICKED TO DEATH

In a Drunken Quarrel About Politics.

A Welsh Workman in the Elwood Tin Mills Meets Death at the Hands of a Political Opponent.

Anderson, Ind., Sept. 19.—A quarrel over politics at Elwood resulted in a murder. James Llewellyn, a Welshman, who works in the tin plate works at that place, and an American, who gives his name as Joseph Turner, got into a discussion over the respective merits of Harrison and Cleveland. Both had been drinking freely, and when Llewellyn said something about Cleveland which did not please Turner the latter struck him with a beer glass, which cut his head open.

Llewellyn fell to the floor unconscious, but Turner continued to kick him about the head and face until pulled away by the officers. A physician was called, but the man died in a few minutes. Turner was arrested and brought here, where he will have his preliminary hearing.

"I AM TIRED OF POLITICS."

This is the Way Blaine Describes His Feelings.

The Ex-Secretary Yearns for the Quiet of Life.

He Has Often Said and Now Repeats: "Politics Is a Vanity Fair of Which I Have Been Only a Part."

Augusta, Sept. 19.—There is pathos even in politics. The Maine election is a vivid illustration of that fact. It brought out so many evidences of the decline of republican spirit that is fodder to the democratic herd that many men are wondering what is to come next.

The history of campaigns in that state is fruitful with much that is worthy of study. As the gathering shadows close about one of the most remarkable men of his time, who has dominated its politics for nearly forty years, the lessons taught become almost sublime in their contradictions and results.

Mr. Blaine's history is before the country, but the touches he has given to the good and bad of political life are many of them hidden, and no more pathetic example of accumulating years and cares under changing strains of political endeavor has ever been known than is furnished by the recent battle in the Pine Tree state.

Let us look. For more than twenty years I have written the story of Maine politics in every campaign, says Frank A. Barr, but the one just closed bears no comparison with the others which have preceded it. It lacked the old-time spirit and power of the man who was aggressive enough to make a battle and powerful enough to command the greatest of the nation to help his cause.

Did I say pathos? Yes. The word does not express what I desire to describe. It came in a sentence from the lips of the foremost statesman of his time, and it was uttered in an open field directly in front of the state house, where he began as a reporter for a country newspaper, and became speaker of the legislative body before he was 30 years of age.

Looking up to the old steeple to which he led the way, he said:

"I was never so proud of any honor in my life, past or present, as when I was first elected speaker of the Maine legislature. I had been a reporter in the house, and schooled myself to remember its proceedings without taking notes, and I could recall the vote in any bill, man for man, without making a tally of the names."

Then the great statesman grew warm as he spoke of the early days, when he began life in that curious old building which is called the state house in Augusta.

Look just across the way. His home stands by the road and you can throw a stone from his fireside to the place towards which his memories turn and his life began. Forty years of great concerns have centered there, and in the old mansion I have seen gathered half of the cabinet of presidents and the most distinguished senators that the United States has ever known. McKinley's political career was practically born in that homestead when Blaine brought him to Augusta in 1880, when the biggest fight of his life was on hand.

Twice during that battle when Blaine was beaten by the greenback craze, and an ordinary man by the name of Gen. Plaisted was elected governor, Mr. Blaine took McKinley under his arm and spoke from the same stump with him. It was practically his start in national life. During that battle there were scenes which have never been repeated in American politics. Every cross-roads was picketed with workers and every school house was filled with a speaker. A dozen times during that combat, which threatened the destruction of Garfield's chances for the presidency, there were more than a hundred and fifty meetings a day in the state of Maine.

Those were the years when the primest powers of the republican party were centered in that September election, and Mr. Blaine dominated every feature of it, bringing to his side not only money without stint, but men of the highest distinction, many of whom have passed to the great unknown, but whose lives are a part of the mighty history of this republic.

Did I say pathos? Yes. For not long ago the great secretary of state, when speaking of the wonderful events which gather like shadows and sunshine over his life, said in one of those moods which indicate fatigue:

"Politics is a Vanity Fair of which I have seen only a part."

There was no great disposition to discuss public affairs of the present moment, but a retrospect best suited the conversation. His mind turned towards other days when John Sherman, Zach Chandler and men of that class made a yearly pilgrimage into the domain where prohibition reigns. Then politics in this commonwealth took on a most serious national character, and the result was watched with most fervent interest. Those were the days when Tom Reed was first elected to congress and began that career which has been so full of fight with men that he is one of the most marked men of his time. Eugene Hale, who married Minnie Chandler, was then in congress, so was Frye, and Boutelle was editing the Whig at Bangor, with little thought of a public career. Milliken had not been discovered up in the far northeast and Dingley was looking after his newspaper at Lewiston, looking like a Methodist minister at harvest time.

It was in those days, ranging from 1878 to 1884, in all the great struggles which brought Mr. Blaine's life and aggressiveness into full play, that Maine politics were regarded as a sensation. That is all changed, now, and the campaign just closed bears no sort of resemblance to those combats when Mr. Blaine was chairman of the state central committee and an absolute autocrat of its political plans and purposes.

The old homestead is silent now, and its walls, which are hung with wonderful memories, give back no sound of that power which once dwelt within its rooms. Just back of the parlor is the small library where the great secretary of state studied and managed politics. Just over his desk hangs the picture of Samuel J. Randall, of whom Mr. Blaine once said to me: "There is one of the most faithful men in the world."

This room is no longer the home of politics, and in its solitude is not even the working place of the master. Upstairs in the little front room facing another street Mr. Blaine wrote his "Twenty Years in Congress" and such other literary matter as he desired.

Sloping off from the roadway of this sad and silent home there is an open field leading down to the banks of the Kennebec river. Over this and then along the road in front of the state house is Mr. Blaine's favorite walk, and it was in strolls over this field and along this highway that the statesman loved to talk politics and lay his plans. It is so no longer. Half of the children who used to make the house merry have passed away and politics are no longer talked and managed in this sacred old spot.

The beautiful lawn to the right of the home where Mr. Blaine was notified of his nomination to the presidency is not shown as it was then, when, after his acceptance, his wife kissed him in admiration of his eloquence. It was a most dramatic scene, which the village photographer neglected to take advantage of. Life, spirit and every other element that could surround political action was there. What a change! For now there is not even echo of the old aggressive days, and much as Chairman Manley has tried to enthuse life and energy into the campaign just closed, the old-time vigor has been wanting and a scant majority the result.

Mr. Blaine will not talk politics and speaks of public concerns reluctantly. In his retirement at Bar Harbor he restates his old declaration which has much that is sad in it: "Politics is a Vanity Fair of which I have only been a part."

Sufferers from dyspepsia have only themselves to blame if they fail to test the wonderful curative qualities of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In purifying the blood, this medicine strengthens every organ of the body, and even the most abused stomach is soon restored to healthy action.

QUITE AN INCREASE.

It is Shown in the Bonded Indebtedness of Ohio.

Washington, Sept. 19.—A summary by states of the annual interest and the per capita interest charged of the combined state and local bonded indebtedness of the country, was issued from the census bureau Saturday. The national, state, and local bonded debt of Ohio in 1890 was $73,000,000 in round numbers, an increase in ten years of nearly $20,000,000. The interest on this was $4,182,000; the average rate being 5.72 per cent. as against 6.82 per cent. in 1880. The interest charged per capita both in 1890 and 1880 was exactly $1.14. The highest interest charged per capita was in the District of Columbia, where it was $3.71, and the lowest was in Mississippi, where it was 15 cents. Ohio was lower than New York, but 4 cents higher than Pennsylvania. The Ohio state debt was $27,003,540; the county debt $66,162,027; the municipal debt, 4,000 or more population, $152,614,019; the municipal debt, less than 4,000 population, $34,192,549; and the school district debt $25,251,793. In Pennsylvania the national, state, and local bonded debt was $108,278,994, a decrease in ten years of $25,500,000. The annual interest charge was $5,778,853. The average rate of interest was 5.35 per cent., as against 5.78 per cent. in 1880. The interest charge per capita was $1.10 as against $1.74 ten years ago. The state debt of Pennsylvania is $11,832,290; the county debt, $7,905,302; the municipal debt, 4,000 or more population, $81,415,615; the municipal debt, less than 4,000 population, $2,192,128; and the school district debt, $4,893,034.

THE DEAD, NOT DEAD

But Living Links in the Endless Chain of Transmission.

Comprehensive Exposition of the Law of Heredity by Dr. Mary Allen at the First Congregational Church.

Before the last notes of the organ prelude had died away, the large auditorium of the First Congregational church was well filled with an appreciative audience gathered to hear Dr. Mary Wood Allen deliver her popular lecture on "The Bequests we Leave Our Children."

After the usual evening prayer and choir response—a beautiful and solemn service—Prof. Fisk presented Mrs. Allen, who, as a former member and co-worker in this congregation, and with a national reputation as a public speaker, needed no introduction to a Toledo audience.

Dr. Allen began her address without any preface or introductory remarks.

The first record we have of the doctrine of heredity is found in the first chapter of Genesis. We understand this law in the vegetable world, and know that whatsoever a man seweth, that also shall he reap.

In the animal world the law of heredity is understood, and size, speed, and almost any trait is reproduced.

And man is not exempt from this inexorable law. The sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generations. Many people consider this a cruel law, not realizing that it has put into our hands a weapon against every evil under the sun.

"We are all omnibuses, in which our forefathers ride," says Oliver Wendell Holmes. And if this were true, we would sometimes feel inclined to dump the whole lot of our progenitors, feeling sure that we could pick up a load that would suit us far better. But we are not omnibuses, for our forefathers must leave the impress of their presence and lives. They cannot descend and leave this living vehicle as they found it. We are rather like hit and miss rag carpets, made up of the odds and ends of our ancestors, colored with their traits and woven in the loom of life.

Every individual has three characteristics— those of race, nation and family; and they are all easily recognized. We speak of the jealous Spaniards, the irascible Italian, the enterprising American, the witty Irishman, and as these names are mentioned we each call to mind the especial features and traits of a peculiar race and nation.

Just as these traits are transmissible, so are physical defects and infirmities, as are also powers of intellect and the effects of education.

We hear men say they do not want intellectual wives, but they expect intellectual children, taking it for granted that the intellect is inherited solely from the father.

Men say, we marry the girl, not her family. But they are mistaken; they do marry her family, and though a man abhors his mother-in-law, he may see her worst traits reproduced in his own daughter.

Oh that we could realize the importance of abiding by this law; of finding out what we can do for our posterity to make them wiser and better.

We strive for wealth to leave our children, but it is in our power to leave imperishable legacies.

Vice tends to its own extinction, virtue is its own reward. We are clothed, it is true, in the cast off garments of our ancestors, but we have a personality for which we are responsible.

We are not answerable for our intellectual capacity, but we must answer for its cultivation, and for our observance of the laws of health and life.

Filial disrespect is often an inherited quality. Aristotle relates the story of an excuse offered by a man who beat his old father: "My father beat his father, and he his, and my son will beat me when he gets old enough; it runs in our family."

Beware of these traits that "run in the family."

Inherited faults are no excuse. Marshal Ney proudly replied, "we are our own ancestors," when taunted with the fact that the imperialists had no pedigree.

The lecture closed with a plea to young men to beware of sowing wild oats, which must yield a harvest of bitterness, and to girls to be careful about giving their children drunken fathers.

We hear much of the dignity of motherhood; would that we heard more of the dignity of fatherhood.

Mrs. Allen then recited her beautiful poem on "Motherhood," and the lecture ended.

She held the attention of her audience to the close, no less by her graceful presence, than by her eloquence and oratorical powers.

Although the audience was large, it should have been larger, and would be if Mrs. Allen should ever repeat the lecture.

NO REVOLUTION.

City of Mexico, Sept. 19.—The reports from El Paso, regarding a revolution in Chihuahua or Sonora are untrue. It was merely an Indian trouble at Tamache which has already been adjusted.

A yellow fever hospital has been established at Cordoba where there are a number of refugees from Vera Cruz.

The cholera reports from New York are creating consternation.

ROBERT L. McELROY, 209 AND 211 SUMMIT STREET.

NEARLY TEN THOUSAND

Turned Out to See Sullivan and Corbett.

John L. Has Plenty of Friends in New York.

Standing of the Clubs in the Big League — General Sporting Notes.

New York, Sept. 19.—A splendid ovation was given John Lawrence Sullivan in Madison Square garden to-night. Nine thousand men and about 300 women lent themselves to the occasion and showered wild applause when the ex-champion appeared in the ring to wind up his benefit with a bout with Jim Corbett, his victorious opponent in the recent contest at New Orleans.

It was strictly a Sullivan crowd, and anybody who had the idea that Sully had lost friends by his defeat would have seen their error by witnessing his reception.

It was no half-way applause, but one that seemed to tell the champion pugilist of a decade that the hearts of his old admirers were still warm for him, and as one enthusiast put it, all were yet willing to pit him against any man in the world."

It was just 10 o'clock when John H. Dunn, master of ceremonies, leaped over the ropes and assisted Sullivan to the ring. He had been followed from his dressing room by a couple of hundred men who gave the hint to the great crowd that Sullivan was coming.

The murmurs grew louder, and as Sullivan's burly frame appeared above the ropes, broke into rousing cheers.

Sullivan turned from right to left and bowed his head in acknowledgement of the greeting. But the cheers continued. Sullivan folded his arms across his breast and turned his eyes toward the roof to conceal from those nearest him the moisture that dimmed them.

Twice he essayed to address the crowd, but it would not let him. Then Corbett leaped over the ropes and hastening to the center of the ring, took Sullivan's bare hands in his gloved ones. The cheers then were something tremedous. Quiet restored, the ex-champion twisted his mouth to one side and in a deep voice said:

Ladies and Gentlemen—I thank you all very greatly for this hearty reception; a reception after my defeat. (Loud applause). I have nothing to say but praise for the present champion. (Cheers). If he will continue in the right path he can hold the championship as many years as I did. I am glad he is an American and I want to see him hold it. I have no excuse to make for my defeat. (Great cheers). I was defeated. (Appalause). When a defeated man makes excuses, he makes the greatest mistake of his life.

This was the end of the speech, and after the audience had approved of it by the aid of their lungs Corbett was called upon. When the din finally ceased, Corbett arose to make his speech. It was very short and delivered in so low a tone that it was heard but a few feet from the ring. He said:

Ladies and gentlemen: It affords me great pleasure in appearing here to-night at Mr. Sullivan's benefit. I know he deserves it, and as he said before, he hopes I will hold the championship as long as he did, I can only say I hope so with him. (Prolonged applause, during which Corbett endeavored to continue. He gave it up in the midst of the applause, and closed with these words.) "Well, I will try and hold it, anyway."

A second later Mr. Dunn called time and the men went to the center of the ring for business. They were attired as in the ring at New Orleans. If the crowd expected any heavy hitting it was disappointed, as the exhibition consisted of three very tame minute and one-half rounds. All sorts of advice was shouted at Sullivan, such as "Give him the right, John;" "Now get in a good one for revenge," but the ex-champion smiled sadly and continued in the exchange of light blows.

When the bout was over Corbett leaped lightly to the ground, while Sullivan clambered down the other side more slowly. Only a few people gathered around Corbett as he hastened to his dressing-room. It was for Sullivan that the spectators made a break. He could hardly make his way through the crowd of struggling men, and the big basket of flowers which he carried above his head narrowly escaped destruction. Sullivan may well be satisfield with his reception, as it not only showed him that he still had friends, but netted him a very handsome profit. Later in the night Corbett was given a reception at the Tenderloin club. Afterwards he went to the Coleman house, where Mike Dwyer turned over to him the $20,000 stake which he won at New Orleans.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—President M. Bensinger, of the Brunswick-Blake-Collender company, returned to the city from Europe yesterday. He puts a new phase on the Ives-Schaefer quarrel in Paris, by claiming that the former is no longer entitled to the emblem. He says: "The rules require that a contest for the championship shall be played within 60 days from the time a challenge goes into effect, and that if either party conspires to defeat this or any other rule relative to the balk line emblem, the match shall be declared off. The match set down to be played at Paris between the 20th and 25th of July did not take place. They were themselves directly responsible for this, and no one else. In view of these facts, I believe that the 14-inch balk line championship emblem now reverts to the donors, and the stake and the money must be returned to Ives and Schaefer. Ives returns home October 2. He and the Brunswick company are likely to lock horns over the emblem question."

PAULDING.

The Republicans Place a Ticket in the Field.

Paulding, O., Sept. 19.—The Paulding county republican convention was held here Saturday. The following ticket was nominated: Arthur Kling for treasurer; J. L. Bishop, of Carryol township, for commissioner; Patrick Carrol, for infirmary director; and Dr. J. W. Fife, of Melrose, for coroner.

AMUSEMENTS.

Aunt Bridget's Baby at the People's This Week.

Katherine Germaine Company in "Said Pasha"—A Good Week At Wonderland.

The Katherine Germaine Opera company presented the comic opera Said Pasha at Wheeler's Saturday evening to a better house than that of Friday evening. This piece gave Miss Germaine a better opportunity to display her talents than does Amorita, and she appeared to much greater advantage. All of the principals received repeated encores and the comedian, Dan Young, was given an ovation. The entire company is of a very high order, and should they ever favor Toledo with another visit they will undoubtedly draw big houses.

Geo. W. Monroe.

Almost every play-goer remembers fat Geo. W. Monroe. He was the old Irish lady in "My Aunt Bridget," who made thousands laugh with his side splitting enunciation of "Oh, Be Gosh." Now that he has taken up another comedy and one that is said to be fuunier than the old one, he has created a new trade mark to take the place of "Oh, Be Gosh." It is "Gee Whiz," pronounced "G-e-e-w-h-i-z-z." To hear him get it off like the sound of escaping steam will cause shouts of laughter from the auditor.

Mr. Monroe has also done what few actor managers do, he has surrounded himself with some very clever people who can sing, dance, and play their parts admirably. People of the present day desire to laugh and be amused and with that point in view Mr. Monroe has dished up a very pleasing evening's entertainment and so divided it up that there it not a dull moment to the audience.

New songs and dances, elegant costumes and pretty scenery, joined together with bright and witty dialogues constitute "Aunt Bridget's Baby," besides "Aunt Bridget" herself, it takes exactly twenty-one people to assist her, and not one with a thinking part. Miss Nellie Rosebud will play the "Baby" and get "Billy" her sweetheart into all sorts of scrapes. Thos. J. Ryan adds to the fun by falling in love with Aunt Bridget, and as "McFee," from Kankakee keeps the audience in peals of laughter, in fact, it is too hard to tell of all the good things in "Aunt Bridget's Baby." They will all be at the People's this week, opening to-night.

Wonderland.

The best attractions that have been presented since the opening will be put on at Wonderland this week, and that popular place of amusement will undoubtedly do big business. Among the features will be Mahomet, the speaking horse, Prof. Young's automatic orchestra, the Langan juvenile musical artists, and in the theater the Bickley & Barron vaudeville company will amuse the audience with a high-class performance. One of the stars of their cast is Master Eddie Abbott, the 8-year-old magician, and he is indeed a wonder.

TO GO TO CHICAGO.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 19.—Rev. Dr. Graham Taylor preached his last sermon at the Fourth church yesterday. He will start for Chicago Friday.

Scientists say that an average man of 154 pounds weight has enough iron in his system to make a plowshare and enough phosphorous to make 500,000 matches.

A BALLADE OF SUMMER.

One must be more than hard to please
Who cannot now contented be,
For if disposed to take your ease
There ras the mountain and the sea,
Whichever may the best agree.
Kind nature, too, that none may fret,
Gave for the summe fits decree—
That one may love and soon forget.

Within a hammock 'neath the trees,
When from all worldly troubles free,
It's nice to feel the wooing breeze
That blows from flower-scented lea,
And as you note the amorous bee
Suck nectar from each flowerpet
Then speed away, you're quick to see
That one may love and soon forget.

The maiden cold enough to freeze
In town forgets her pedigree
When in the country. By degrees
She thaws, and no one is so free,
When at her shrine you've bent the knee
And won her heart you half regret
Fair summer's kind immunity—
That one may love and soon forget.

L'Envoi.

Agnes, when I swore constancy
That time we kissed and parted, yet,
Believe me, I could not foresee
That one may love and soon forget.

M'KINLEY DATES.

Times and Places Where the Ohio Governor Will Make Political Speeches.

Columbus, O., Sept. 19.—Gov. McKinley will go to New York, where he will meet Col. William M. Hahn, who has charge of the speakers' bureau of the national republican committee, and arrange as to dates and places for the campaign speeches which he will make outside of Ohio this fall. The governor wishes to make arrangements which will enable him to remain in this state as much as is possible. The governor will be in Washington the 20th, 21st and 22d. The evening of the 20th he will deliver a memorial address on Gen. Crook before the Kenawha division.

From Washington the governor will go to Delaware, accompanied by Postmaster General Wanamaker, and will speak at Wilmington. The evening of the 23d he will deliver an address upon the tariff, with, perhaps, incidental reference to the question of state banks, at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia. This will be the first of a series of four meetings arranged by the Philadelphia business men, one of the other addresses to be delivered being a discussion of the currency question by Senator Sherman. All four of the addresses at this series of meetings will be printed and circulated as campaign literature.

The governor will return to Columbus on the 24th, and on the 28th he will speak at Washington, Pa. Friday, the 30th of September, he will speak at Mechanicsburg, Champaign county, in the afternoon, and the evening of Saturday, October 1, he will deliver an address in Cincinnati. Either the 21 or 31 of October he will go to Missouri where he will speak at the Kansas City Interstate Fair on the 4th. He will deliver two or three other addresses in Missouri before his return east, in accordance with a promise made some months ago to Major Warner, candidate for governor.

MADE GOOD HIS THREAT.

A Ten-Year-Old Boy Sets Fire to His Little Sister's Clothing.

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 19.—George Gould, a 10-year-old boy, burned his sister Grace, aged 6 years, to death, near Masontown. The lad had been carrying coal from their coal mine to the house, a short distance, and when his mother said she would send Grace to help him, he said he would burn Grace if she came. The sister went along to the mine, however, and there the boy set her afire with a pit lamp, and after watching her clothes burn for awhile he ran off. The child died in a few hours in terrible agony.

A TOWN BURNED.

Vienna, Sept. 19.—The town of Olkusz in the province of Kielce, Russian Poland, a short distance across the border, from Galicia, has been destroyed by fire. The town has a population of about 2,300, the greater number of whom have been made homeless.

A MOTHER

OF

TRIPLETS

Tries DR. HAND'S COLIC CURE and Secures Rest After

Three Sleepless Nights

MARLBORO, Ohio, April 14, 1892.

The Hand Medicine Co.

DEAR SIRS:—Having used nearly four bottles of your Colic Cure, I forward you this testimonial, hoping it may benefit many mothers with suffering babies. I am the happy mother of triplets, all girls; now 14 weeks old. When they were about 3 weeks old they were taken with a very severe attack of wind colic. There were three days and nights I had two of them in my arms nearly all the time. I tried all the remedies I had ever heard of without any relief. A sample of your Colic Cure was handed me, which I used with the very best results, and I sent for more at once and I shall recommend it to every mother. I feel there is no language strong enough to express its value. I have also used several of the other Remedies and found each to be exactly as you represented them to be. I trust the Lord will forever bless you for procuring a remedy to relieve suffering innocence.

Heiskell's Ointment

Is a positive cure for all forms of

SKIN DISEASE.

We base this assertion on our observation of over thirty years, in which time a very large number and variety of Skin Diseases have been reported to us as cured, by the simple use of Heiskell's Ointment, without the aid of internal remedies. Many of these were cases of long duration, that had resisted the treatment of the most eminent medical talent in this and other countries. Heiskell's Ointment seems never to have failed in a single instance.

The Robisons Have Another Suit.

Philip Cooper sued the Toledo Electric Street Railway company in common pleas court to-day to recover $6,000 damages for personal injury.

A Robison motor car collided with the plaintiff's wagon on Washington street June 28.

Ida Kimbell was in the wagon at the same time and sustained injuries for which she claims $5,000.

Dan Wagner Seriously Injured.

Daniel Wagner, foreman for E. A. Eversman, the hardware dealer, jumped from a Bellevue Park car on Saturday night, near his home at 610 Colburn street, and was knocked down by a car coming from the opposite direction. The wheels passed over one of his limbs and fractured it. He was also quite seriously injured in a general way, but will probably recover eventually.

Headquarters Train on Deck.

A telegram was received this morning from Col. James M. Hall, who accompanied the Grand Army headquarters train, which left Toledo Saturday evening, over the Wheeling & Lake Erie route. The telegram states:

"Reached here last night in elegant form, and resolutions beyond words to express were presented to our company, indicating the finest service ever given on any occasion."

This must be gratifying to Col. Hall and other Wheeling & Lake Erie officials, who arranged for the party.

Temperance Meeting in Toledo.

A series of temperance meetings will open in Toledo this evening, under the auspices of the Good Templars. Mrs. J. C. Stone, deputy right worthy grand templar of the state, will be the speaker. The series begins to-night, and the schedule is as follows:

Ironville, Lee street chapel—Monday and Tuesday, September 19 and 20.

Auburndale, Monroe Street M. E. church—Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 21, 22 and 23.

Oliver Place Baptist church—Saturday and Sunday, September 24 and 25, and at the Sunday school September 25.

North Toledo, Albany Street M. E. church—Monday and Tuesday, September 26 and 27.

Will Interview Congressman.

A large meeting of the Political Equality club was held at the home of its president, Mrs. Murphy, Saturday afternoon.

The usual reading from Civil Government was varied by an article on suffrage, by Wendell Phillips.

A discussion followed on the feasibility of interviewing candidates for congress, and it was decided that it should be done, and that support should be given to the candidate who favored federal suffrage.

Tickets for the lecture course were distributed. The first lecture will occur on Wednesday evening, October 19, and will be delivered by Lide Meriwether, of Tennessee.

A meeting will also be held Saturday afternoon, October 8, with Mrs. Judge Bentley, on Superior street.

Rev. J. L. Albritton Has an Offer.

The following paragraph, from Saturday's Fremont News, will prove of interest of Toledoans, since the reverend gentleman was pastor of St. John's church for three years:

Rev. J. L. Albritton a few days ago received a very urgent call from Bishop Newman to accept the pastorate of the Scoville avenue M. E. church of Cleveland, at a salary of $2,000 per year. After casting the matter up in his mind Mr. Albritton last night arrived at the determination of remaining in Fremont and so notified the bishop by wire this morning. This will be good news to the Methodist people of the city, as during the two years of his labors here he has endeared himself to all his people. The associations he has formed and social ties which would have to be gone over again helped him greatly in arriving at his decision. The News is glad to know that Mr. Albritton will remain in Fremont.

Accidental Death at W & L. E. Shops.

Frederick Nopper, a blacksmith employed in the Wheeling & Lake Erie shops at Ironville, was instantly killed Saturday night by the breaking of a belt in the shops. His legs became tangled therein, and he was wound around the shafting until both arms had been broken and his left limb wrenched from his body. After the accident the remains were taken to Couldwell's undertaking rooms, where they were prepared for burial and then taken to the residence of the deceased at the corner of Front and Millard streets. Mr. Nopper was 27 years old. He leaves a wife and two young children.

Quiet Morning in Police Court.

The following cases were disposed of in police court this morning: Jacob Ames and D. Higgins, drunk, $5 and costs each; Wm. Mehan and Christopher Harden, begging, each $10 fine, the costs and 15 days. The case of Rudolph Bolen, charged with buying and selling stolen goods, was continued for five days to allow the defendant to file a bill of exceptions, and the cases of P. F. Curtis and Chas. H. Koppe, charged with petit larceny, were continued until September 20. The case of John W. Allen, who was arrested Saturday on the charge of forging a $100 note, was put over until September 21. Chas. Kinney, who was arrested for committing an assault on a companion named Skelly four months ago, had his case continued until Wednesday.

Col. Smead Scores Another Victory.

Col. Isaac D. Smead has received a dispatch from Boston stating that he has been successful in the patent litigation in which he had been engaged there. Judge Putnam submitted an opinion from the bench which completely destroys the opposition his sytem has had in New England for over two years. Of course, Col. Smead is rejoicing over the victory, and is not slow in expressing decided opinions in the matter. "The fullest information was laid before the court," said the colonel, "and as a result the verdict is on the side of honor and honesty. The costs will be heavy, which the infringers will have to pay, but they are not entitled to any sympathy, since they knew of the scheme to wrong those who for years had secured patents on devices which caused much study, to say nothing of the great expense. In other words, a vile fraud has been stamped upon."

Have Applied for a Charter.

At the regular meeting of the Day Nursery circle Saturday afternoon, the matter of incorporating a company was discussed and it was agreed to apply for a charter which was done, but will not be used before October 1.

It is hoped to erect a building as soon as possible, and several options received, but no action taken.

There were 11 little ones at the nursery this morning, and the number sometimes reaches as high as 15.

When the tax payers realize that in taking care of these little ones they are enabling mothers to work who would otherwise have to be taken care of by the city, they will be more generous with their donations. There have been generous contributions, but the management is at constant expense, and there is no fund or way of carrying on the work except by donations. The nursery will probably remain in the present quarters for awhile, but hope soon to have a home of their own.

Took a Dose of Morphine.

Valentine Bierwirth, a laborer living at 2142 Fitch street, took a liberal dose of morphine Saturday night about 6 o'clock, and died from the effects thereof early Sunday morning.

He went home Saturday evening in an intoxicated condition and had to be helped to bed. He was heard to say that he would be dead within a few hours, but no attention was paid to the remark. Shortly after he retired he manifested symptoms of violent illness, and Dr. Cherry was summoned to attend him. The doctor gave the case up as a hopeless one, after working for some time on the unconscious man, and then Dr. Henzler was called in, but he could not restore consciousness, and finally the patient died as above stated. Bierwirth was in the employ of the Consolidated Street Railway company. His wife, who had been married twice before, is now widowed for the third time.

Did Not Attend the Encampment.

John H. Wilson is a colored veteran whose patriotism took precedence of his discretion and got him into serious trouble. He was very anxious to attend the G. A. R. encampment at Washington, and as he didn't have the wherewith the resorted to forgery to obtain it. Wilson is an exfather-in-law of Wm. Thompson, and on Saturday he forged an order on Mr. Thompson's wife for a valuable hammerless gun that he knew Thompson owned. Mrs. Thompson gave up the gun and Wilson took it to Gladwell's pawnshop and "hung it up" for $20. He then went to the Wheeling depot and prepared to take the first train for the national capital, but in the meantime Mr. Gladwell had become suspicious and started an investigation, the result of which was the discovery that Wilson did not own the gun. A warrant was issued for him and he was captured at the depot as he was about to board a train. In police court this morning he waived an examination and in default of $800 bail was committed to await the action of the grand jury.

ARRESTED IN UTAH.

John L. Thompson, an Indicted Mail Clerk in the County Jail.

John G. Thompson, son of the once prominent Ohio politician of that name, is in the county jail on the charge of opening money letters while acting as mail clerk on the Toledo and Columbus route three years ago.

An old schoolmate recognized Thompson in Salt Lake City and notified the authorities who placed him under arrest.

He arrived here yesterday in charge of U. S. Deputy Marshal Cleveland, of Salt Lake City, and was taken charge of by the federal authorities here. He will have his trial at the December term of court.

TWO MORE FORGERIES.

More Spurious Notes Uttered by Allen Have Been Discovered.

Since the arrest of J. W. Allen on Saturday for attempting to borrow $100 from John L. Wiltsie on a forged note, it has been discovered that he has heretofore forged two other notes and obtained their face value from innocent parties.

The first note is dated at Monclova, June 21, 1891, and is a promise to pay John W. Allen $100 six months after date. It is signed by J. H. More and F. R. Meyers and is indorsed by John W. Allen. This was cashed by a grocery man in the Fifth ward who does not want his name mentioned. The second note is dated Toledo, Aug. 13, and is a promise to pay John W. Allen $90 in ninety days after date. This is signed by Martin Casper, William Dorr and John Cowling, and is indorsed by J. W. Allen and W. H. Scott. The second note was cashed by a Summit street saloon-keeper who is also anxious to have his name kept from the public. No steps have yet been taken to prosecute Allen for forging the two above notes.

TWO BODIES FOUND.

One In the Maumee and the Other in a Pond.

The turgid waters of the Maumee yesterday yielded up the body of Bartholomew Garrity, a Lake Shore laborer, who suddenly and mysteriously disappeared from home about a week ago. Captain James Skeldon, of the tug Mary Green, discovered the body on the surface of the water at the foot of Monroe street. Garrity was about 37 years old. He was married and had quite a large family. At the time he disappeared he was supposed to have had considerable money on his person and inasmuch as no cash was found in his pockets it is thought that he squandered all he had in a debauch and fell into the river while drunk. The body, which was badly decomposed, was buried yesterday afternoon, after the coroner had held an inquest.

The remains of William Godell, a 35-year-old laborer, who lived with his wife and five children on Friends street, East Toledo, were yesterday discovered in a little pond of water at the junction of Oak street and Starr avenue. Godell was sober and industrious, and the only solution of the manner in which he met his death is that he lost his way and stumbled into the pond while groping about for a street leading to his home. As decomposition had set in the body was buried yesterday soon after Coroner Beckwith completed an inquest thereon.

TALK ABOUT FISHING

But Northern Michigan is the Place Says Mr. Swayne.

Mr. N. H. Swayne, Mr. Carlton Walbridge and Mr. A. H. Walbridge returned Saturday night from a fishing trip to northern Michigan.

"We went to La Borne lake," said Mr. Swayne this morning, "and we had some excellent sport. The place is out of the world, but the fishing was the best I have ever seen. The bass fishing was great. We caught none weighing less than three pounds and many weighed nearer five pounds."

Mr. John Lawton, formerly of this city, who joined the party, met with an accident while with the party. While leaning over the side of a canoe he dipped his hand into the water when it was caught and badly bitten by a huge pike. The fish held on, while Mr. Lawton, badly frightened, attempted in vain to shake it off.

Three fingers were badly lascerated. Otherwise the party met with no accident and had a delightful outing.

THE PREACHERS' UNION

Meet in Bi-Monthly Session—A Paper to be Started—Other Matters.

The Preachers' union held the first meeting of the season this morning. Rev. S. D. Hutsinpiller was elected temporary chairman and Rev. S. G. Anderson acted as secretary pro tem. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. G. M. Candee and Rev. W. C. Hopkins.

The report of the committee on protest against press and pugilism was accepted, and the committee dismissed with thanks.

Rev. D. M. Fisk presented the scheme of a paper, called the Sentinel, to be conducted in the interest of philanthropy, charities and religion in Toledo, of which the editors asked the indorsement of the preachers. This brought forth an interesting and lengthy discussion and finally resulted in a motion, made by Rev. Anderson, to appoint a committee of five to look this paper over and make a decision and report at the next meeting.

Revs. S. G. Anderson, Pope, Sheridan, Fisher and Hopkins, were appointed on said committee.

Rev. Ross then stated that he would this week, sever his official connection with his present church and enter a new field of work. He thanked the union for courtesies extended. Regret was expressed by the union in regard to Rev. Ross' departure.

Rev. Dr. McGaw presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Preachers' union cordially indorse the action of Brothers Fisk, Anderson and Hutsinpiller, in protesting against the proposed opening of places of amusement on Sunday.

Dr. Bacon's paper on Literature for Churches" was postponed for a month.

The meeting then adjourned until two weeks from to-day, when Rev. Hopkins will talk on T. W. T. A. work.

CLOVER SEED.

Toledo's Standing as the Principal Market Recognized.

The following, taken from C. A. King & Co.'s circular of Saturday, gives some interesting information:

Everybody realizes that Toledo is the leading clover seed market in the world. Here is what a large New York seed broker wrote us last Thursday:

"The undersigned respectfully requests a copy of your annual circular, giving prospects of clover seed crop. My European friends write me that should values become more reasonable the demand would be as good as last year. However, as Toledo dictates values of clover seed, Europeans, if they need it, may be compelled to enter at current values or go without."

We have not recently made any general crop report on clover seed. It is a little early. Our general reports from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan mostly show small yield, and in many places quality will be poor. Iowa yield is placed at only two bushels per acre. Ohio has the poorest crop.

The September report of the department of agriculture gives the average condition of clover seed as 82 for the entire country. They made no report a year ago, but in August, 1891, gave the average at 88. Ohio averages this September is 75, Michigan 78, Indiana 86, Illinois 86, Wisconsin 86, Iowa 87, Missouri 92 and Kansas 85.

Receipts here thus far have been small, and mostly of No. 2. Receipts here this week only 2,200 bags, against 4,405 bags corresponding week last year. Price was $4.53 a year ago, but there was a large shortage then to exporters for September shipments; now there is a large shortage for October shipments from here. One exporter here yesterday received an order direct from Australia. Stocks of old clover seed everywhere are very small, and this is partly an offset to the advance in price over a year ago.

DEMOCRATIC Congressional Convention

The Democrats of the Ninth Congressional District of Ohio, comprising the counties of Fulton, Lucas, Ottawa and Wood, are hereby notified to meet in convention in Bowling Green, Wood County, at 10 o'clock a. m.,

ON TUESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1892,

for the purpose of placing in nomination a candidate for congress to be supported at the November election.

The basis of representation in this convention will be one vote for every one hundred votes, and one for every fraction of 50 and over, cast for James E. Campbell for Governor in 1891. Upon this basis the several counties are entitled to the following vote in convention:

Fulton	17
Lucas	85
Ottawa	29
Wood	46

L. C. COLE, Secretary. W. J. COLBURN, Chairman.

What bonds can Ashley purchase to a good advantage this campaign?

Senator Hill will speak in Brooklyn tonight. It will be the key note of democratic success and the knell of republican disaster in the Empire state.

The attempt to kill Gov. Flower because he did his duty in the cholera emergency reveals a new phase of life in Gotham, and a bad phase it is.

Gov. McKinley's civil service machine, warranted to turn democrats out, has ordered the removal of Superintendent Fricker, of the Blind Asylum. He will be succeeded next month by S. S. Burrows, of Geneva.

The anti-snappers have retired in Buffalo and have turned the campaign over to the regular democratic organization, with the promise of hearty co-operation. General Harmony seems to command the forces in New York now. He is a winner.

That man Peck, labor commissioner of New York, is a Jim Dandy in helping the republican party. He not only fixed figures to suit, but burned all documents showing sources of information. For this last act, which evidently is a misdemeanor, Peck is liable to be removed from office.

W. D. Howells who became editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine with quite a flourish, a few months since, has resigned. He is at present rusticating at his old homestead in Ashtabula county, Ohio. Mr. Howells added several bright features to the Cosmopolitan during his brief stay with the enterprising magazine.

The owners of the ocean flyer, City of New York, having complied with the new American registry law, the United States flag now floats at the masthead. One provision of the registry law compels the larger percentage of the crew to be American citizens. Merchants and shippers of New York are making strenuous efforts to induce the owners to ship no aliens. They want the big liner to be American in everything.

Mr. Ashley couldn't carry one side of this congressional district by strength of his own personality. It was Ashley, the man, who was retired from congress for keeps a number of years ago by the people of northwestern Ohio. It is only Ashley's money bags that are running for office this campaign. It is his pronounced purpose to spend money lavishly to buy his way to congress. It remains to be seen how far he can spread that power over the intelligent people of the Ninth district.

Many veterans who march past the war department in Washington this week will hardly repress feelings of indignation toward Harrison for appointing a man who was in the rebel army to be secretary of war. That is the side on which Steve Elkins fought. It was bad enough for republicans when President Hayes appointed a southerner as postmaster general—but secretary of war, that is getting too close to business for the veterans.

Another of the same kind. The national convention of republican league clubs, held in Buffalo last week under brass band notice, was attended by less than one thousand delegates. It was a flat failure, a fizzle of the fizziest kind, so pronounced by the New York Tribune. It was even worse, but of a kind, with the attempt to open the Ohio campaign with a league demonstration near Cincinnati. The Commercial Gazette admitted the utter failure of that attempt. What is the matter with the Grand Old Party anyhow? The machine rattles and the wheels seem to have slipped several cogs.

The democratic county convention last Saturday was a representative gathering of earnest workers in the cause of the party. The ticket nominated is worthy the support of every elector in the county. The resolutions call attention to the extravagance of republican officials. The delegation appointed for the judicial convention is squarely against endorsing a republican candidate. The congressional delegates are men who will pick a sure winner against Ashley. The democrats of Lucas county have made a good campaign beginning and should now thoroughly organize every township and precinct. It is among the probabilities that our party shall be successful this year. Good work will secure victory.

The election of directors of the Wabash was announced last week. The new board will organize on Wednesday, when the real fight will develop. The Little Wizzard wants his son, George, made president or chairman of the board so that the western policy of the road may be dictated by Mr. Gould. The Wabash management between St. Louis and Kansas City is hurtful to the Missouri Pacific, which Gould owns, hence his determination to secure the Wabash for self protection. It is Gould's policy to make every other interest subservient to his own. There is no community of interest in his make-up. He wants everything conducted in severalty and he wants all of severalty himself.

WILD CAT BANKING.

The plank in the democratic platform which calls for the repeal of the tax of ten per cent. on the issue of state banks is a handle for a deal of republican pumping and pounding. They pretend to see the beginning of the return to wild cat banking. When such leaders as Gov. McKinley seriously take up this cudgel, it is evidence of a display of demagogy, because one is apt to give the Governor credit with intelligence and fairness in the discussion of public questions.

This particular banking plank was written by Hon. M. D. Harter, the sound Ohio congressman. He is neither an advocate of fiatism nor wildcatism in any form. He is one of the most reliable of the pronounced good money men of the present congress. His ideas upon the banking question are the conclusions of intelligent study. Within a few years a substitute must be found for the present national banking system of issue. As government creases. It has already decreased one-half. Mr. Harter's plan is to provide issue with undoubted security, as good security as the present substantiality of the national bank circulation. That such security can be provided every man who has faith in his state or his country knows to be possible. To yell "wild cat" at a party that is looking to the future is partisan damphoolery. It would better become the republican howlers to join effort with so good a man as Mr. Harter in providing well for the future.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY TICKET.

The democratic county convention did its work well on Saturday and the excellence of the ticket nominated will commend itself to voters who desire to rebuke the republican machine politicians who have carried their end in spite of all protests. It is also satisfactory to the members of the democratic party, who praise it to the highest extent.

Mr. Jacob Kohn, the nominee for recorder, is well known as a young man of sterling business qualifications. He has always been a faithful worker in the party ranks, and being a native Toledoan has an acquaintance which will aid him materially in the coming canvass.

Mr. Luther Gibbs has served the county faithfully and well in the past in the office of commissioner. His former work in that office is a guarantee of what the tax-paying public may expect as a result of his re-election. Fully acquainted with the county's needs, the party choice is not an experiment. The minority should also be represented in this important board.

Joseph Gates, the nominee for infirmary director, is one of Toledo's oldest and most respected residents. He has been engaged in the drug business for years, and is possessed of all the qualifications to make a good infirmary director.

Will Root, named for surveyor, is a young man with much experience. He has been connected with the city civil engineer's force under many of the officials, and was considered a leading candidate for the office now filled by Mr. Miller. Mr. Root could not fail to give satisfaction if elected.

On the whole, the ticket is worthy of support, and the Bee misjudges public sentiment if the gentlemen named shall not be elected by handsome majorities.

THE GREAT CONSPIRACY.

This is the title of a book just put into circulation which exposes the methods of a wheat ring in the northwest. It purports to have been written by one on the inside, and very likely he deals with truths of both fire and sword, as he reproduces letters and documents to prove the conspiracy.

The purport of this story is that the conspiracy originated, and exists to-day, with the head center among the elevator owners in Minneapolis. Charles A. Pillsbury and United States Senator Washburn are mentioned as aiders, abbettors and participators in the scheme to swindle the farmers of the great northwestern wheat belt. The elevator companies fixed prices for wheat at first hands and controlled every local buyer. If they couldn't regulate the local merchants, they destroyed their credit and pushed them to the wall, or bribed them to leave the country. One instance is given of a buyer having received $5,000 for five years to quit. When farmers, without understanding the cause of depressed prices, organized to build elevators of their own, the railroads refused to furnish cars.

It is of record in this book that Pillsbury used his power with the farmers (they having confidence in him), to deceive them. In answer to an inquiry Pillsbury wrote a farmers' committee that the elevators were losing money and had been for a number of years. Within three weeks of writing the farmers this letter he addressed a letter to a Paris banker saying that the Minneapolis elevators were netting a profit of from 30 to 50 per cent. every year. Fac similes of both of these letters are printed in this book. The devices by which short weights were given farmers are also described. In short, the whole scheme of swindle from the time wheat is loaded for market until it finds its way to the big elevators is exposed in the "Great Conspiracy."

This remarkable exposure is suddenly made and the northwest is to be flooded with copies of the book. Every farmer in the wheat belt is to have one. Inasmuch as it is shown that the conspirators are principally republicans, many of them leaders, the effect upon the coming election may be disastrous to the republican presidential ticket. An intense feeling of indignation and spirit of revoluton among the farmers of Nebraska, Minnesota and the Dakotas must follow the publication of this book. The outcome will be watched with interest.

BETTER REMAIN AT HOME.

Monterey, Mexico, Sept. 19.—Ponciano Diaz, the celebrated bull fighter, and matador, who is known throughout Mexico and Spain for his daring performances in the bull ring, states that he is arranging to go to the Chicago world's fair with a company of bull-fighters and give daily exhibitions of Mexico's national sport.

HELD HIM UP.

Alton, Ill., Sept. 19.—While James Ryan and wife, of Litchfield, were driving on the road a few miles south of here last evening they were stopped by two highwaymen. The robbers grabbed the horse and pulled their revolvers. Mr. Ryan gave them $100 and a gold watch and was allowed to continue his ride.

DEAD CATTLE KING.

San Francisco, Sept. 19.—Wm. Dunphy, the pioneer cattle king of California, died at his home last night, aged 64 years. He was one of the richest men in the state and made his money in cattle. He leaves a widow and three children.

NATIONAL COAL CO.

Organized With Judge Stevenson Burke as President.

The Company Leases the Entire Plant to the Phenix Coal Co., of Toledo.

The National company was organized at Cleveland, Saturday, with the following officers and directors: President, Judge Stevenson Burke, Cleveland; vice-president, Wm. P. Rend, Chicago; secretary and treasurer, Charles S. Hickox, Cleveland; G. G. Hadley and R. R. Kinkade, Toledo.

The company upon its organization leased the entire plant, which consists of an operating mine and 1,100 acres of coal land in Athens county to the Phenix Coal company, of Toledo.

The Phenix company is now negotiating for a complete electric mining plant to cost $25,000.

The new company is organized with a capital stock of $160,000—the price paid to the Erie Coal company for the mine, lands and plant.

The mine is on the line of the T. & O. C. R. R. and is one of the best in the country.

TO ISSUE A CHALLENGE.

The People's Party Will Invite Colonel Hodge and M. Johnson to Debate.

Cleveland, Sept. 19.—The people's party congressional committee of the Twenty-first district was organized by the election of Dr. L. B. Tuckerman as chairman and L. Weingardt as secretary. It was decided to issue challenges for a triangular debate between Hon. Tom L. Johnson, Col. O. J. Hodge, and Dr. C. W. Wooldridge, the three congressional candidates. People's party meetings will be held in the public square on Saturday night and at the West Side market house Tuesday night. At the county convention of the people's party the following platform was adopted:

"The people's party of Cuyahoga county, in addition to the measures proposed in the national and state platforms, advocate and pledge themselves to do all in their power to carry into effect the following measures:

"First—Municipal home rule, by which it shall be made lawful for cities and towns to engage in any business which the people deem desirable, without asking permission of the state legislature.

"Second—That all lines of business operated under public franchises, especially street railways, gas and electric lighting plants, and telephones, shall be owned and operated by the public, for the public good, without profit.

"Third—Permanent tenure of place with promotion for merit, and admission at the lowest grades only, in all branches of the public service.

"Fourth—The abolition of the contract system of doing public work.

"Fifth—That eight hours shall constitute a day's work in all branches of the public service.

"Sixth—The repeal of all special and unnecessary municipal legislation.

MERRILL, RING & CO.

Buys Out the Entire Plant of Bills & Koch.

The Purchase Includes Planing Mill and 10 Acres of Land—Stock of Lumber, Etc.

This morning Merrill, Ring & Co., the Saginaw lumber firm recently located here, completed a deal whereby it comes into possession of the lumber plant of Bills & Koch, of this city.

The plant, which comprises the planing mill, lumber yard and stock, etc., is located on Oak street on the East Side and is on the line of the Hocking, T. & O. C., T., C. & C. and two other roads.

The consideration is private. This gives the Saginaw firm one of the best locations in the city for lumber yards.

The planing mill is to be enlarged and the plant generally improved.

ARNOLD'S AMOURS.

More About the Poet in Japan.

He Furnished a National Spectacle by His Caperings Among the Dancing Girls.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 19.—Sir Edwin Arnold, author of "The Light of Asia," diplomat and editor of world-wide reputation, has, according to reports from several sources, acted in such a manner that the tongues of the people are wagging about him in a very lively manner in Mikado land. Joseph A. Gosser, an Australian who has been sojourning in Tokio for the past year, arrived this morning on the steamer China, and in an interview said:

"When a foreigner takes up his residence in Japan considerable latitude is allowed him in his mode of living, and no one inquires too closely as to his morality, provided he is guilty of no flagrant violation of good morals. Every foreigner, particularly if unmarried, is expected to maintain a Japanese mistress, and he is expected to conduct his amours with sufficient discretion to avoid public scandal.

"Sir Edwin Arnold, the moment he arrived in Japan, proceeded to form the acquaintance of the native dancing girls. When in Tokio, where he made the longest stay, he lived at the Hotel Imperial nominally, but nearly all his nights and most of his days were passed in the rooms of some one of his many inamoratas. He was the most indefatigable lover the Japanese women had ever encountered, and they all adored him. The foreign residents were not so well pleased with his carousings, which were carried on almost under the eyes of their wives and daughters.

"On his former trip he was accompanied by his daughter, but her presence did not restrain him in the least, and he denied himself none of the excesses for which he is famous throughout Japan. 'Look at that old man,' said the foreign residents. 'He has attained an age when such tendencies could easily be subdued. He has no respect for his family or his own daughter.'

"Finally the English poet was denied entree to the houses of reputable foreigners, and was ignored by all except Japanese. Sir Edwin was absurd in his extravagant praises of the Japanese women. He called them 'angels of light' in his poems, whereas they are creatures of clay, and poor specimens at that. Japanese women are all very well in their way, but we all felt in Tokio that Arnold was foolishly fond in his eulogies.

"Strong influence is being brought to bear upon the Mikado to appoint Sir Edwin to a position in Japan similar to that of poet laureate in England. When he returns to the Flowery Kingdom he will almost certainly get the appointment. The Japanese feel very much flattered by the idea of having an English poet in their service. They ridicule the glamour with which he has invested the lives and habits of the Japanese people, and say that his deft apologies for their immoralities were made to serve as a cloak for his own affairs with the little native dancing girls."

Sir Edwin for many years was the controlling mind of the London Telegraph, and he afterwards held an important government appointment in India, where he became thoroughly familiar with the esoteric literature of Buddhism. The poet is married to an American lady, is a few months less than 60 years of age, and was knighted by Lord Salisbury's government for his political services in India.

LOW RATES TO HILLSDALE.

Account of the Hillsdale fair, to be held October 3 to 7, inclusive, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway will sell excursion tickets to Hillsdale and return on above dates, at one fare for the round trip, with 25 cents added for admission to the grounds. Tickets will be good going on date of sale, and returning not later than October 8.

JAMES B. FRANCIS DEAD.

Lowell, Mass., Sept. 19.—James B. Francis, consulting engineer of the Locks and Canal company, died yesterday from debility succeeding an operation. He was 77 years old and had served in both branches of the city government. He leaves a wife, three sons and a daughter.

TRADE DEPRESSION.

More Evidence of Hard Times Abroad.

London, Sept. 19.—Another significant proof is given of the existing commercial and industrial depression.

The Commercial Deposit and Permanent Building society gave notice to-day of its intention to dissolve. The reason stated is the increasing withdrawal of deposits consequent upon the growing lack of public confidence in such institutions.

Advices from Glasgow state that considerable anxiety exists owing to the depression in the shipyards of the Clyde. Fifteen thousand men are idle with little prospects of any improvement of their condition, and it is feared that widespread destitution may drive the sufferers to lawless acts, as well as greatly increase the burdenss of the community.

Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Grain shippers were wanting few boats and were bidding but 2 1-4c for wheat to Buffalo this morning. Vesselmen were certain that rates would not break to-day.

Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 19.—Telegrams from Duluth say that 3 1-4c has been paid on wheat and the same offered on more tonnage. Ashland ore rate is $1.15, but Escanaba is comparatively easy, as shippers were fairly well supplied with boats Saturday at 75c. The steamer William Chisholm, which was picked up on Lake Michigan Saturday by the steamer Norma after blowing out high pressure cylinder head and breaking piston and rod, left Mackinac for Cleveland this morning in tow of the steamer Outhwaite.

OFF FOR BUZZARDS BAY.

Don M. to Have a Talk With Cleveland.

Very Probable That the Democratic Candidate Will Again Visit New York.

New York, Sept. 19.—Don M. Dickinson, chairman of the democratic campaign committee, will go to Boston this afternoon and to Buzzards bay to-morrow.

He said this morning that Mr. Cleveland might make another visit to this city soon. No arrangements for such a visit have yet been made, but Mr. Dickinson said it was likely that Mr. Cleveland would come here in order to give his friends an opportunity to consult with him in regard to the campaign. He will come here next month to stay for the winter.

A PASTOR IN TROUBLE.

New Orleans, La., Sept. 19.—Dr. A. E. Bridger, pastor of the Congregational church at Jennings, was cowhided yesterday by D. E. M. Burke, who acted for the male portion of the congregation for uttering sweeping condemnations of the characters of the women of the town generally. Dr. Bridger did not flinch under the punishment.

KILLED BY A TRAIN.

Blairstown, N. J., Sept. 19.—Mrs. H. J. Wessler and her only daughter, Kate, aged 19, were instantly killed yesterday by the Pennsylvania, Poughkeepsie & Boston express. They were on their way home from church in a carriage when the train struck them.

SERIOUS INJURY.

Ottawa, O., Sept. 19.—(Special)—Mr. Jones, who is present teacher of Ottawa public school, went on a short hunting trip and met with an accident in which he hurt his face pretty badly, and he may not be able to teach this week, but it is hoped he will soon recover.

HEALTH PRECAUTIONS.

Everything Being Done to Prevent Spread of Disease,

But It Is Necessary to Go Still Further—Talk With Health Officer Fisher on the Matter.

Toledo will soon be right in line with the other Ohio cities that have taken measures to quarantine all immigrants coming to or passing through the city on trains, and also all passengers coming from infected points. Such precautionary measures have been adopted at Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati, and if Health Officer Fisher is allowed to carry out his ideas the same precautionary measures will be taken here.

A Bee called on Dr. Fisher this morning and was shown the following letter from C. O. Probst, secretary of the state board of health:

Columbus, O., Sept. 17, 1892.

Dr. A. W. Fisher, Health Officer, Toledo, Ohio:

Dear Doctor—The question of quarantine at Toledo came before the board yesterday. We will inspect all lines from the east, which, it was thought, would guard Toledo except from passengers coming through Canada. Detroit, it is supposed, will, in a large measure, guard this route. Cleveland has prohibited immigrants from passing through that city.

The state is being guarded at Cincinnati by the local authorities, and for the present it is deemed that local inspection at Toledo will suffice. The state will supplement this inspection, if necessary. Please give me the exact situation at Toledo.

Yours,
C. O. PROBST,
Secretary.

"In reply to the above," said Dr. Fisher, "I wrote Dr. Probst that along the lake and bay shore, the Michigan road and from Detroit, Toledo was unprotected in almost every sense of the word. We have got to close all the avenues that are now open if we expect to keep out the cholera. Unless we establish a rigid quarantine some infected person is apt to get into the city and spread the disease.

"I am trying to arrange for a meeting of the health board this evening, and if a meeting is held I will recommend the appointment of inspectors on all the railroads that carry immigrants. The inspectors could board the trains at the city limits and make a thorough inspection of all the passengers. If this is done the landing of any infected persons could be prevented.

"The state authorities assumed control of the quarantine station beyond Presque Isle last week, and now it is a quarantine station in name only, as there is no one there to meet incoming vessels. This is one of the most dangerous points of ingress around the city, and if the state board does not propose to do anything there the city should assume charge again and maintain the station as it should be maintained. This matter will probably come up at the next meeting of the local board. It should be attended to immediately."

It is probable that the health board will meet to-night and recommend the adoption of whatever additional precautions may be deemed necessary.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Sad Accident Reported From Sylvania.

Sylvania, O., Sept. 19.—(Special)—Last Friday night Mr. and Mrs. Christian Stout were awakened by hearing something fall and then a scream.

Rushing to the stairway they beheld their daughter, Mrs. Reid Stout, lying on the floor enveloped in flames.

Mrs. Stout had accidentally knocked over a lamp. The flames were quickly extinguished, and Mr. Stout, who at the time was burning tile near by, was hastily summoned, but in spite of the tender care of a loving husband, fond father and mother she passed away Saturday.

She leaves a husband and two children and a number of relatives to mourn their loss.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Ottawa Lake church.

THE YEAR BOOK.

A Pretty Little Pamphlet Full of Good Things.

A Gratifying Report of the Good Work of Trinity Church and Its Healthy Moral and Financial Condition.

The "Year Book," a neat blue-covered pamphlet of 45 pages was distributed among the members of Trinity church yesterday. The object, as set forth in the rector's salutatory being, first, to give a practical directory as regards services, organizations, with their officers, hours of meeting, etc.; secondly, to give brief reports in regard to finances, and the work done by the different departments, and thirdly, to emphasize the need of increased co-operation and support.

Corporation.

The church is corporated as follows:

Rev. Charles Scadding, rector.

Wardens—Mr. F. B. Swayne, senior warden; Mr. H. S. Walbridge, junior Warden.

Vestrymen—M. C. F. Curtis, treasurer; 314 Summit street; Messrs. George W. Davis, W. S. Brainard, S. H. Waring, W. Simmons, S. C. Reynolds, R. F. Russell, Walter Hodge.

Clerk of the Vestry—Mr. S. H. Waring.

Staff.

Clergy—Rev. Charles Scadding, rector, 2278 Ashland avenue; Rev. W. H. Bamford, assistant, 211 Ontario street.

One of the clergy may be seen daily in parish building from 2 till 3 p. m.

Organist and Choir Leader—Miss Mary R. Pomeroy, 1013 Huron street.

Sexton—John Ayers, 711 Mulberry street.

Lay Readers—Messrs. F. B. Swayne, Walter Hodge, D. B. Smith.

Visitors—Miss Anna Church, Miss Flora De Graff.

Property.

Church, 1; chapels, 2; parish building, 1; amount of insurance on property, $44,300.

Financial.

A word of explanation should be given as to the financial statement on the following pages. From a comparison of the figures it will readily be seen that the balance existing May 1, 1891, was exhausted and a deficit created by May 1, 1892. The balance existing May 1, 1892, will be more than exhausted by May 1 1893. The policy of the vestry has been to provide in advance a fund to meet the current expenses so as to avoid a large indebtedness during the year, and accordingly at Easter, 1892, it was requested that the offering be made large enough to commence the year with a balance in the treasury.

Treasurer's Report.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

Where the tawny tiger-lilies in the mashy meadow bloom
And the tangled rushes wither by the red and sluggish rill,
There is silence all unbroken; there are secrets all unspoken
That the trembling grass is hiding from the hill.

Where the mystic firs in cluster on the rock hillside stand,
Where the vines empurpled masses in the sunset's passion glow,
Lo! the bird notes are a-dying and the troubled wind is sighing
For the secret that the meadow must not know.

Over meadow, over mountain, in a city by the sea,
There are wives and mothers waiting; there are sweet hopes growing cold;
There are eyes that watch in anguish, there are loving hearts that languish
For the secret that shall nevermore be told.

—Edgar Mayhew Bacon, in August (Fiction Number) Scribner.

THE BULL RING.

I was early in my seat, for I liked above all things to see the motley crowd of Spaniards come trooping to their national game. I was not in the sombra or shady seats, for I prefer to take my place among the crowd, one of whom I almost am now; and moreover, what right has a penniless young artist to spend a dollar on seeing a bull-fight?

How noisy and hot and dusty they all looked as they trooped in and took their seats around me! I was surprised at the crowd; there was no great matador going to kill bulls to-day, yet all the cheaper seats were filling. I asked a peasant in a flat black hat, trousers and highly decorated gaiters, and a bright waistcoat, and wearing his coat slung from his shoulders: "Senor, can you tell me why so many people are here to-day?"

He looked at me a moment with an expression of surprise.

"You do not know?" He spoke with a strong Andalusian accent. Sebastian will kill the bull."

"Sebastian?" I said. Senor, do not think me ignorant, but I know no bull fighter of that name."

He laughed.

"He has never killed a bull before; to-day is his first. He comes from this part; that is why everyone is here." Then he added: "I will tell you his story. Sebastian is only a muleteer, who once a week drives a caravan of mules from his mountain village to this town. But he is poor; the mules are not his; he only works for another." He paused for a moment, then he added, "You are a stranger here?"

"Yes," I said, "I only arrived yesterday."

"Then you do not know Juanita—La Belle Juanita, we call her." He did not wait for me to answer, but continued: "Everyone falls in love with Juanita, and Sebastian, like the rest, did too. He prayed and besought her to marry him, but she is proud and would not look at one so humble. But after a time his handsome face and oft-repeated tale impressed her; so she told him she would marry him if he would kill a bull in the ring at to-day's fair. But hush! Here she is."

I turned in the direction in which he pointed and gazed with astonishment at one of the most lovely creatures it has ever been my lot to see. All eyes were fixed on her, yet she was as impassive as if she were alone. Her golden hair—not uncommon among the Spaniards—was bound up high upon her head and surmounted by a dark crimson rose, which held in its place her mantilla of black lace.

It was time the fight commenced, and already the impatient Spaniards were shouting and calling, but yet the gobernado had not taken his seat in the box reserved.

I was all impatience to see Sebastian, and his was the first bull to be killed. Behind and all around me were the jaunty, dusty, crowd among whom passed the sellers of water and the venders of biscuits and nuts. Below is the arena with its burning, yellow sand, like a miniature desert.

Suddenly the band began to play. I turned and saw that the executor's box was no longer empty. A small man in a black coat and a silk hat had taken his seat, surrounded by a half dozen officers in full uniform. One by one the spears of the picadors were given him to measure, as all must be of the same length—sufficient to slightly wound and enrage the bull without killing it.

Four of the matadors were professionals; the fifth, to whom was given the place of honor, in the center and slightly to the front, was Sebastian. All eyes were now turned on him.

A gate is opened in the arena. With a roar and a shout from the people the bull rushes from his darkened cell into the ring. He looks around him. For a moment he paws the ground, then, led on by the moving cloak of one of the matadors, he charges. A graceful bend of the body and a slight movement of the body and the bull has passed his quarry, who stands untouched and smiling behind him. For a moment the "toro" stands as if stupefied, then espies a larger and safer bait, and with a fearful rush lifts horse and picador into the air, hurling them to the ground in a heap. The matadors are quick, however, and, while the picador is being helped to his feet and the attendants are unsaddling the horse, fast bleeding to death from a wound in its side, they call off the bull by waving their cloaks and keep his attention fixed on themselves. He is a good bull. The people are delighted. "Bravo, toro!" they cry.

Two of the matadors step to the side of the arena, leaving their cloaks and taking in each hand a braderillo. They step into the center of the ring, and poising themselves on tiptoe face the bull. A moment the now furious beast pauses, then with a charge, makes for one of his adversaries; for a second all is a cloud of dust, in which the forms of bull and men are scarcely discernible; the next, the bull is bellowing round the ring with the points of the banderillos fast in his shoulders, and the banderillo is smiling and bowing unscathed.

The bugle sounds.

Sebastian, who up till now has gazed in a careless way at the scene, steps forward, takes the sword and the flag, and with a gallant stride, marches to the administrator's box, where he swears to kill the bull.

There is a deafening cheer as he throws his hat among the people, to be held until he returns, victorious or—dead.

I turned instinctively toward Junita; she was leaning back slowly fanning herself her half-closed eyes scarcely conveying an expression of the interest in the proceedings. Sebastian faces the bull, the flag in his left hand, his eyes watching the beast's. His hand is as steady as a rock.

The bull charges; I drew a quick breath; Sebastian is all right, gracefully, with the ease of a practiced bull-fighter, he escaped the horns, which merely touched the scarlet flag. A cheer rings from the crowd, bringing a flush to his cheek. Again the bull charges; again and again; each time Sebastian is unscathed, but as yet he has had no chance of killing the bull. He is facing it now; slowly he raises the sword—the point never trembles. For one second all is dust, the next I see his manly form laid out full length in the sand. Accustomed as I am to bull-fights I shuddered.

"He is killed!" cried the people, he is killed!"

The bull never looks at him again, passing on to attack the cloak of one of the matadors. I gaze at Juanita once more. Her expression has not altered to the least degree, her fan merely vibrates a little quicker. I hated the woman.

A shout from the people recalls my attention. Sebastain has risen, picked up the sword and is facing the bull once more. There is silence in the ring like death. Again the sword is raised, again all is dust, and again a form lies prostrate in the sand, but this time it is the bull. Sebastian has killed it at one stroke, a feat seldom accomplished by even the masters of the art. Never have I heard such a shout as rang through and through the building as Sebastian approached the gobernado and bowed. He was paler than ever, but a smile of victory lit up his lips. Then, sword in hand, he turned, approached and faced Juanita, his dark eyes gazing into her face. Her expression was the same as ever; as he bowed to her she never altered a feature. There was no ssmile of encouragement, scarcely a sign of recognition; she plucked a rose, however, from her breast and threw it to him.

He stopped and picked it up, and, with his eyes fixed on hers, lifted it toward his lips—hesitated—threw it to the ground and trampled it under foot. A deafening cheer arose from the crowd—cheer upon cheer.

I looked for Juanita. She had left the ring. Five minutes later, as Sebastian passed through the archway into the open air, still in the scarlet and gold, a dagger was buried deep in his breast. I saw Juanita do it, and it was the only time I ever saw her smile.—San Francisco Call.

A DUEL IN PHILADELPHIA.

There was a novel duel in the garden one day last week. For some time the friends of the ostrich and those of the largest goat, which was imported from Harlem, have been disputing which was the more all-absorbing, so to speak, or, in other words, as to which was possessed of the most slippery throat and the most hardened digestive organs, so a meeting was arranged, the principals agreeing. Each was to submit to the other something to "down" until one or the other failed. As it turned out the duel was a short one.

The ostrich went off and came back a minute later with an empty and very rusty tin can that some years since had held about four pounds of tomatoes. The goat smiled. He opened wide his mouth, seized the can, gave a gulp or two, humped himself, and the can was at rest. Then he hopped to get a morsel for his friend the ostrich. He found an empty paint keg. He rolled it into the arena and waited the effort of the ostrich with open confidence. But he wot not of that elastic neck of the bird, never a wot. The ostrich made the effort of his life. The keg went down hard, but it finally went down, and the bird hustled off in search of a stickler for his friend the goat.

THE BEE OF THE FUTURE.

J. Edward Giles, in writing on the desirability of producing a larger race of bees, proposes to cross our present race of bees with the giant bees of India and obtain a race with long probosc's and, perhaps, increased size (if that should be found of any advantage). This improved race should be crossed with the South American stingless bee, and thus a race would be secured with all the good points of the Italian bee, with lengthened proboscis and stingless, such a bee, in fact, as it it would be difficult to improve. It might be found desirable to breed out the swarming instinct, for there appears to be no reason why the swarming instinct cannot be bred out of bees as thoroughly as the sitting instinct has been bred out of certain races of domestic fowls.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HEALTH IN OLD AGE.

Edward Collinson, Queens, N. Y., says: "I commenced using Brandreth's Pills over fifty-five years ago. I first bought them in London, and have continued using them since I came to this country in 1836. I am now over 75 years old, hale and hearty, and attribute my wonderful health to the persistent use of Brandreth's Pills. Occasionally I have a bad cold or severe attack of rheumatism, indigestion or biliousness, but four or five doses of Brandreth's Pills always cure me. Whenever my children have been sick with scarlet fever, measles, acid stomach, disordered digestion or costiveness, a few doses of Brandreth's Pills restored their health at once."

SELECTED MISCELLANY.

Money is called "sterling," because in the time of Richard I. money coined in the east of Germany became, on account of its purity, in especial request in England, and was called Easterling money, as the people of that part of Germany were called Easterlings.

The stock of Bank of England notes which are paid in five years fill 13,400 boxes which if placed side by side would reach over two miles. If the notes themselves were placed in a pile they would reach to a height of five miles. They weigh 90 tons and represent 1,750 millions sterling.

Korean native coin is copper cash. Mexican dollars and Japanese yen are used in the ports to a moderate extent but are almost unknown in the interior, and the cumbrous nature of the medium employed, together with the great fluctuations in its value, is a serious obstacle to the expansion of trade.

There is in St. Louis a firm of rope makers and dealers that has a side line that it does not advertise. It is the manufacture and preparation of hangman's ropes. The firm sell as many as 100 of these ropes annually. Their price of the rope, with the noose ready for use, is $5.

John Good, the cordage king, lives at Far Rockaway in a beautiful cottage. Good's income is said to be $1,000 each day and $1,000 each night. These sums are from royalties on the rope-making machinery which he invented. He worked at the trade of rope-making in an ordinary rope-walk.

Harrison Gray Otis, of Boston, is one of the most stylishly and neatly dressed men on formal occasions, but a Boston News man says: "I have also seen him clad in flannel yachting suit, soaked with salt water, and clinging to his body as only soaked garments can cling, with rubber boots on his feet, and a silk cap upon his head, hair and beard dripping, but with eyes shining with excitment as the winner of a race." He is not effeminate.

It is proposed to cast glass, not necessarily transparent, into large blocks for buildings. This material is practically indestructible, perfect by non-absorbent and, therefore, damp-proof in a manner which few bricks are, and in this way coarse glass of this kind could be made nearly as cheap as concrete stone or baked clay.

When Herbert Sprague, of Bangor, went to bed the other night he carried to his room a bull terrier pup. At midnight Sprague snored, and the dog scratched his face to awake him. Sprague cuffed the dog, whereupon the animal, with true terrier instinct, seized his master by the nose and shook him as he would a rat. The dog is dead now, and Sprague's nose has lost much of its beauty.

Colonel Dodds, who commands the French expedition in Dahomey, is a native of the French colony of the Senegal, and is thus quite at home in the African climate. He is 49 years of age, and won his promotion to the rank of colonel five years ago. He has had a good deal of experience or African warfare, and has the reputation of being a resolute, persevering officer. He is a tall, bony man, with a dark complexion, suggestive of a touch of African blood. He is very popular with his brother officers and his men.

Little B. had just recovered from a serious illness and was as wild as a colt with the pleasure of being out again. The other day he was incited to a picnic and came home brimming over with the happiness he had enjoyed. That night, when he said his prayers as usual at his aunt's knee, he added, of his own accord: "I thank Thee for giving that picnic and letting me go to it."

WHAT YOU DO, DO WELL.

Dr. Talmage's Farwell Sermon Abroad.

A Well-Developed Christian Character Is a Good Thing to Look at.

London, Sept. 19.—The closing week of Rev. Dr. Talmage's preaching tour was marked by several gatherings which in magnitude and enthusiasm eclipsed all that had preceded them. The last service in London was on September 3, when, after addressing three great meetings during the daytime, he spoke to an immense multitude in Hyde Park in the evening. Some estimates place the number at 30,000.

The crowd was so dense that many women fainted and had to be removed. During the service the auditors were raised to the highest pitch of religious fervor, and scenes were enacted such as have not been witnessed since the days of Whitefield. On the following Wednesday evening Dr. Talmage addressed a great audience at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, the largest building in the suburbs of London. Prayer meetings invoking the divine blessing on the services were held in various churches the preceding Monday and Tuesday evenings.

Before the sermon, Dr. Talmage was entertained at a banquet in the large banqueting hall of the Crystal Palace by 100 distinguished clergymen and laymen of every denomination, and from every continent, even including Australia.

A vote of thanks was moved rehearsing Dr. Talmage's eminent services to God and humanity; also that he has traveled over 12,000 miles and preached in every prominent city in Great Britain, to hundreds of thousands of eager auditors; collected vast sums for various English beneveolences, and, throughout the entire tour, paid his own expenses, not retaining one farthing. Rev. Dr. Thain Davidson seconded the motion, and declared that Dr. Talmage commanded the admiration of the entire Christian world for faithfully preaching the orthodox gospel in times of fierce religious dissension. The motion was unanimously carried amid great applause.

Dr. Talmage was then presented, in behalf of his English admirers, with a beautiful and costly gold watch of unique design, inscribed: "Presented to Rev. Dr. Talmage at Crystal Palace, London, in commemoration of his preaching tour through England, in the summer of 1892." Dr. Talmage was then escorted to the great hall, where the vote of thanks was unanimously indorsed and ratified by the entire audience.

He then preached his farewell sermon and shook hands with hundreds at the close. This was the second sermon ever preached in the Crystal palace, the first having been delivered by Pastor Spurgeon thirty-five years ago on the Crimean war. The text selected for to-day is from Proverbs, 30:28: "The spider taketh hold with her hands and is in king's palaces."

Permitted as I was a few days ago to attend the meeting of the British Scientific association, at Edinburgh, I found that no paper read had excited more interest than that by Rev. Dr. McCook, of America, on the subject of spiders. It seems that my talented countryman, banished from his pulpit for a short time by ill health, had in the fields and forests given himself to the study of insects. And surely if it not beneath the dignity of God to make spiders, it not beneath the dignity of man to study them.

We are all watching for phenomena. A sky full of stars shining from January to January calls out not so many remarks as the blazing of one meteor. A whole flock of robins take not so much of our attention as one blundering bat darting into the window on a summer eve. Things of ordinary sound and sight and occurrence fail to reach us, and yet no grasshopper ever springs up in our path, no moth ever dashes into the evening candle, no mote ever floats in the sunbeam and pours through the crack of the window shutter, no barnacle on a ship's hull, no burr on a chestnut, no limpet clinging to a rock, no rind of an artichoke but would teach us a lesson if we were not so stupid. God in his Bible sets forth for our consideration the lily, and the snowflake, and the locust, and the stork's nest and the hind's feet, and the aurora borealis, and the ant-hills. One of the sacred writers, sitting amid mountains, sees a hind skipping over the rocks. The hind has such a peculiarly shaped foot that it can go over the steepest places without falling, and as the prophet looks upon that marking of the hind's foot on the rocks, and thinks of the divine care over him, he says: "Thou makest my feet like hind's feet that I may walk on high places." And another sacred writer sees the ostrich leaving its egg in the sand of the desert, and without any care of incubation, walk off; and the scripture says, that is like some parents, leaving their children without any wing of protection or care. In my text, inspiration opens before us the gate of a palace, and we are inducted amid the pomp of the throne and the courtier, and while we are looking around upon the magnificence, inspiration points us to a spider plying its shuttle and weaving its net on the wall. It does not call us to regard the grand surroundings of the palace, but to a solemn and earnest consideration of the fact that "the spider taketh hold with her hands, and is in king's palaces."

It is not very certain what was the particular species of the insect spoken of in the text, but I shall proceed to learn from it the exquisiteness of the divine mechanism. The king's chamberlain comes into the palace, and looks around and sees the spider on the wall, and says: "Away with that intruder," and the servant of Solomon's palace comes with his broom and dashes down the insect, saying: "What a loathsome thing it is." But under microscopic inspection I find it more wondrous of construction than the embroideries on the palace wall, and the upholstery about the windows. All the machinery of the earth could not make anything so delicate and beautiful as the prehensile with which that spider clutches its prey, or any of its eight eyes. We do not have to go so far up to see the power of God in the tapestry hanging around the windows of heaven, or in the horses or chariots of fire with which the dying day departs, or to look at the mountain swinging out its sword-arm from under the mantle of darkness until it can strike with its scimetar of the lightning. I love better to study God in the shape of a fly's wing, in the formation of a fish's scale, in the snowy whiteness of a pond lily. I love to track his footsteps in the mountain moss and to hear his voice in the hum of the rye fields, and discover the rustle of his robe of light in the south wind. Oh, this wonder of divine power that can build a habitation for God in an apple blossom, and tune a bee's voice until it is fit for the eternal orchestra, and can say to a fire-fly: "Let there be light;" and from holding an ocean in the hollow of his hand goes forth to find heights, and depths, and length, and breadth of omnipotency in a dewdrop, and dismounts from the chariot of midnight hurricane to cross over on the suspension bridge of a spider's web. You may take your telescope and sweep it across the heavens in order to behold the glory of God; but I shall take the leaf holding the spider and the spider's web, and I shall bring the microscope to my eye, and while I gaze and look and study and am confounded, I will kneel down in the grass and cry: "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty!"

Again, my text teaches me that insignificance is no excuse for inaction. The spider that Solomon saw on the wall might have said: "I can't weave a web worthy of this great place; what can I do amid all this gold embroidery? I am not able to make anything fit for so grand a place, and so I will not work my spinning-jenny." Not so said the spider. "The spider taketh hold with her hands." Oh, what a lesson that is for you and me! You say if you had some great sermon to preach, if you only had a great audience to talk to, if you had a great army to marshal, if you only had a constitution to write, if there was some tremendous thing in the world for you to do—then you would show us. Yes, you would show us! What if the Levite in the ancient temple had refused to snuff the candle because he could not be a high priest? What if the hummingbird should refuse to sing its song into the ear of the honeysuckle because it cannot, like the eagle, dash its wing into the sun? What if the raindrop should refuse to descend because it is not a Niagara? What if the spider of the text should refuse to move its shuttle because it cannot weave a Solomon's robe? Away with such folly. If you are lazy with the one talent you would be lazy with the ten talents. If Milo cannot lift the calf he never will have strength to lift the ox. In the Lord's army there is order for promotion; but you cannot be a general until you have been a captain, a lieutenant, and a colonel. It is step by step, it is inch by inch, it is stroke by stroke that our Christian character is builded. Therefore be content to do what God commands you to do. God is not ashamed to do small things. He is not ashamed to be found chiseling a grain of sand, or helping a honey bee to construct its cell with mathematical accuracy, or flinging a shell in the surf, or shaping the bill of a chaffinch. What God does, he does well. What you do, do well, be it a great work or a small work. If ten talents, employ all the ten. If five talents, employ all the five. If one talent, employ the one. If only the thousandth part of a talent, employ that. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the crown of life." I tell you if you are not faithful to God in a small sphere, you would be indolent and insignificant in a large sphere.

Again, my text teaches me that repulsiveness and loathsomeness will sometimes climb up into very elevated places. You would have tried to have killed the spider that Solomon saw. You would have said: "This is no place for it. If that spider is determined to weave a web let it do so down in the cellar of this palace or in some dark dungeon." Ah! the spider of the text could not be discouraged. It clambered on, and climbed up, higher, and higher, and higher, until after awhile it reached the king's vision, and he said: "The spider taketh hold with her hands, and is in king's palaces." And so it often is now that things that are loathsome and repulsive get up into very elevated places.

The church of Christ, for instance, is a palace. The king of heaven and earth lives in it. According to the Bible her beams are of cedar, and her rafters are of fir, and her windows of agate, and the fountains of salvation dash a rain of light. It is a glorious palace—the church of God is; and yet, sometimes, unseemly and loathsome things creep up into it—evil speaking and rancor and slander and backbiting and abuse crawling up on the walls of the church, spinning a web from arch to arch, and from the top of one communion tankard to the top of another communion tankard. Glorious palace, in which there ought only to be light and love and pardon and grace; yet a spider in a palace!

Home ought to be a castle. It ought to be the residence of everything royal. Kindness, love, peace, patience, and forbearance ought to be the princes residing there; and yet, sometimes dissipation crawls up into that home, and the jealous eye comes up, and the scene of peace and plenty becomes the scene of domestic jargon and dissonance. You say: "What is the matter with the home?" I will tell you what is the matter with it. A spider in the palace.

A well-developed Christian character is a grand thing to look at. You see some man with great intellectual and spiritual proportions. You say: "How useful that man must be!" But you find amid all his splendor of faculties, there is some prejudice, some whim, some evil habit, that a great many people do not notice, but that you have happened to notice, and it is gradually spoiling that man's character—it is gradually going to injure his entire influence. Others may not see it, but you are anxious in regard to his welfare, and now you discover it. A dead fly in the ointment. A spider in the palace.

Again, my text teaches me that perseverance will mount in the king's palace. It must have seemed a long distance for that spider to climb in Solomon's splendid residence, but it started at the very foot of the wall and went up over the panels of Lebanon cedar, higher and higher, until it stood higher than the highest throne in all the nations—the throne of Solomon. And so God has decreed it that many of those who are down in the dust of sin and dishonor shall gradually attain to the king's palace. We see it in worldly things. Who is that banker in Philadelphia? Why, he used to be the boy who held the horses of Stephen Girard while the millionaire went in to collect his dividends. Arkwright toils up from a barber's shop until he gets into the palace of invention. Sextus V. toils up from the office of a swineherd until he gets into the palace of Rome. Fletcher toils up from the most insignificant family position until he gets into the palace of Christian eloquence. Hogarth, engraving pewter pots for a living, toils on up until he reaches the palace of world renowned art. And God hath decided that, though you may be weak of arm, and slow of tongue, and be struck through with a great many mental and moral deficits, by his almighty grace you shall yet arrive in the King's palace—not such a one as is spoken of in the text—not one of marble—not one adorned with pillars of alabaster and thrones of ivory, and flagons of burnished gold—but a palace in which God is the King and the angels of heaven are the cup-bearers. The spider crawling up the wall of Solomon's palace was not worth looking after or considering, as compared with the fact that we, who are worms of the dust, may at last ascend into the palace of the King Immortal. By the grace of God may we all reach it. Oh, heaven is not a dull place. It is not a worn-out mansion with faded curtains, and outlandish chairs, and cracked walls. No; it is as fresh, and fair, and beautiful as though it were completed yesterday. The kings of the earth shall bring their honor and glory into it.

LIQUOR IS HER BANE.

Rich, Young, Beautiful, Yet Addicted to the Cup.

Miss Danforth, Through Her Attorney, Requests Her Release From An Inebriate Sanitarium Where She Is Now Detained.

New York, Sept. 19.—St. Xavier's Sanitarium for Inebriates at Inwood, was brought prominently to public notice recently through a writ of habeas corpus, which was argued before Judge Beach in supreme court chambers. The proceedings brought to light a rather unusual state of affairs; a young woman confined in an asylum, who wishes to be released, claiming that she is held there against her will, and who resorted to the courts to attain her end.

She was represented by a lawyer, while the institution's attorney, John B. Pyne, of 67 Wall street, looked after its interests.

The young woman, who is 30 years old, was committed to the asylum last May, and she has not left its grounds since, except for short walks in the beautiful country, adjacent. She was addicted to the use of intoxicating beverages. It is claimed that the habit was formed when, after a serious illness, her physician advised her to indulge moderately, and later she even adopted the morphine habit. The girl was sent to the institute through a regular commitment issued by a supreme court judge.

Two physicians, said to live in this city, first testified to her insanity before the magistrate, and the commitment was made out for a year, or until she was entirely able to take care of herself. She has always been known by the sisters in charge of St. Xavier's as Miss Danforth, but nobody appears to be positive that this is her right name; most probably it is not, for it is believed that her parents are wealthy residents of this city, who would not like their name blackened by the facts in the case becoming public property.

It could not be learned whether "Mrs. Danforth" appeared in court as an advocate for, or an opposer of, her daughter's petition.

Fifty dollars per week has been paid for Miss Danforth's keeping at St. Xavier's for the last four months.

Her lawyer urged that she was entirely cured of her craving for intoxicants, that it was a great imposition to longer keep her confined. He also hinted that the patient had threatened to do away with herself unless released.

Mr. Pyne, representing the Sanitarium, asserted that Miss Danforth was not in fit condition to be discharged, and that as her commitment had been made for at least a year, she ought not to be released yet.

Decision was reserved by Judge Beach, as he believed he had no right to nullify the orignal commitment. He promised to look into the matter, however.

The mother and the lawyer then left the court room.

To a reporter who went to the Inwood retreat, little information about the mysterious and unfortunate girl was accorded. Sister Mary, the sister superior, referred the caller to Lawyer Pyne, who could not be found. She said:

"We are merely the custodians of this young woman for the time she is here, and it would not be proper to talk of her affairs; indeed, we know very little about her, not even her real name, unless it be Danforth. Her mother was here yesterday morning, but I cannot tell you her address, although we are almost certain that she lives in New York."

Sister Mary politely refused to say who was responsible for the afflicted young woman's incarceration, but she denied that she had threatened suicide.

"She is getting better slowly, and may be sufficiently cured to go home soon, but that she is not so, at present, one can easily see at a glance."

Rather inconsistently, the sister refused to accord the reporter a chance.

It was learned that a private nurse is employed to take care of Miss Danforth.

From another source, the reporter learned that the patient's mother spends much of her time at Inwood, and was there yesterday. Villagers, who have chanced to see Miss Danforth on the walks about the pretty brick home facing the river, say that she is more than ordinarily attractive, and a gorgeous dresser.

There are several families of Danforths in the city directory.

YELLOW FEVER ON BOARD.

Ocean Springs, Miss., Sept. 19.—The steamship Reslna from South America arrived at Ship island to-day with yellow fever on board. One of the crew died yesterday and was buried at sea. The state boards of health of Mississippi and Louisiana were promptly notified and all traffic between Ship island and Ocean Springs has been prohibited. The vessel will be taken to the quarantine station at Chandleur island.

If Barytes and other adulterants of White Lead are just as good as

why is it that all the bogus and adulterated white leads are always branded "Pure," or "Strictly Pure White Lead?"

No one ever puts a misleading brand on an article of merchandise, unless he wants to "work off" an inferior for a better.

This Barytes or Baryta, is a heavy white powder, worthless as paint; costing only about one cent per pound and is used to adulterate and cheapen the mixture. No one ever adulterates white lead with an article costing more than Lead.

If you purchase any of the following brands you are sure of having strictly pure white lead—

ANCHOR (Cincinnati)
ARMSTRONG & McKELVY (Pittsburgh)
BEYMER-BAUMAN (Pittsburgh)
COLLIER (St. Louis)

What Quotations for the Day—Prices Current for Produce and Other Articles.

The receipts of wheat to-day at Minneapolis and Duluth are 683,713 bu., and at five other western points, 827,070 bu.; aggregate, 1,510,783 bu. On the corresponding Monday in 1891 the receipts at the same points were 1,371,775 bu., including 757,562 bu. of northwestern wheat, leaving for the five other western points 514,213 bu., compared with 827,070 bu. to day. Export clearances yesterday from four Atlantic ports were, wheat, 148 537 bu. and flour to an aggregate of 550,000 bu.

English markets are dull, but about steady for wheat and steady for corn.

The visible supply of wheat increased last week 2,773,000 bu.; corn 74,000 bu.; oats 604,000 bu. In the corresponding week in 1891 wheat increased 2,608,000 bu.; corn 1,163,000 bu.; oats 438,000 bu.

The shipments of wheat from India last week equaled 540,000 bu. Previous week 160,000 bu. From April 1, the commencement of the crop year, to Sept. 17, 22,590,000 bu., compared with 32,750,000 bu. in the corresponding period in 1891.

Without foreign news items we can offer, absolutely no change in the elements that effect grain markets. That some is buying and who is selling is a matter of only temporary significance. The wonder to me is that at 72c bus. for good wheat at Chicago there are not more men who esteem it good investment. Whether sold for May or not. But the price has been lower in previous years and May be again.

To-day the fluctuations in wheat have been light. At Chicago about the best price for December was 75 3-8c, touching 75c once or twice, and closing at that. That is a fair index of the market all around.

Corn has been unsteady and rather weak and closes lower.

In New York October wheat closed at 78 1-2c and December 82c, a loss on each of 3-8c. September corn at 54c, a loss of 3-4c. October at 54c, a loss of 7-8c. October oats at 37 5-8c, a loss of 3-8c.

In Chicago October wheat closed at 72 5-8c, a loss of 1-8c. December 75c, a loss of 1-4c. September corn at 46c and October at 46 5-8c, a loss on each of 5-8c. October oats at 33c, a loss of 5-8c.

In Toledo there has been but the usual activity in wheat futures that has characterized the market for days. It has been a dull and weak market, with only one upward fluctuation, and that was 1-8c, and we close 1-2@2 4c lower, say September and October 3-4c, December and May 1-2c. On the call October sold at 75c. On the regular board September at 75c and October 75c, closing each at 74 1-4c bid: December at 77 1-4c@77 3-8c, closing at 77c bid; May at 82 3-4c, closing at 82 1-4c bid.

Cash wheat was not very active. No. 2 soft sold at 74 3-4c, and closed at 74 1-4c, a loss of 3-4c: No. 3 soft at 67 1-2c and at close L. S., closing at 67 1-4c; No. 4 soft sold at 60c, and at close at 61c; rejected No. 2 at 52c.

Corn—On the call October sold at 47 1-2c; after the call No. 2 at 47 1-2c; No. 3 47 1-2c.

Rye—No. 2 at 58c; October at 58c; No. 3 at 51c to 51 1-2c; rejected at 43c.

Clover seed was a shade easier for cash. On the call October sold at $5.90 and November at $5.87 1-2. After the call prime for cash at $5.90; October, $5.90; November, $5.87 1-2; December, $5.95; No. 2 at $5.65 to $5.75.

Matrimonial Record of a Man Who Is Now in the Divorce Court.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—A story of one of the most sensational cases ever tried in the divorce courts here was related before Judge Tuthill. The complainant was Mrs. Ida Fairfield White, whose husband appears to have wives scattered all over Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania and the middle states.

According to the testimony he made a business of marrying young women for their money and then deserting them. On the stand Mrs. White, who hails from Waverly, Iowa, told how she married White after a three months' acquaintance. He immediately asked her for $3,500. She gave him $500 and he skipped out, saying he would never return.

A large bundle of letters was produced by the attorney, who said: "I have numerous letters from other women who claim to be the wives of this man. One is from Mrs. Rosa White, of Doylestown. She tells how she met White and soon fell in love with him. She says she married him, and on the wedding day gave him $2,500 to open up a business. She declares that that night Mr. White skipped out with the money and wrote her that he had accomplished his purpose and was satisfied." Another woman from Pennsylvania, after telling of her confidence in White to the extent of $1,750, says: "If I were you, Mrs. White No. 3, or 4, or 6, or whatever you are, I would not waste money on a divorce. You are not his legal wife, but his last victim."

After several of these letters had been read and the court informed that White talked of two dead wives in England, the evidence was ordered written up. The police here claim that White has nearly a dozen wives, all of whom have made complaint against the fellow.

DOWN IN A COAL MINE

Scenes in a Level 1,000 Feet Underground.

Miners Have Hard Work and Hard Life.

The Visitor Decides That He Would Not Mine Coal for $10 a Ton—Graphic Description of Underground Passages With Black Diamond Walls.

A descent of 1,000 feet into a coal mine prompts the inexperienced visitor to remark, "Coal should be cheap at $10 a ton."

To one who speeds by in a train a coal breaker is a most ungraceful structure. It seems to have been started in a small way and then made larger by extensions here and there as the fancy of the owner dictated.

But an investigation will soon show that all the apparent extensions were planned in the beginning solely for their usefulness.

A weary toil to the top, up dozens of steps, will prove that the great homely structure is a hive of industry. There is a clatter of machinery and falling coal by the ton, and, in the Hammond breaker, near Girardville, which the writer visited, the life and bustle lent by nearly 300 men and boys, most of whom are picking slate from the coal as it slowly passes along in the chutes.

Everything about, including the faces of the men, is of the color of the fuel they are preparing for the market.

At the top of the breaker the coal is received as it comes up the shaft from the level or gangway, which is now being worked 1,000 feet below.

The slope is wide enough to accommodate two lines of track, and all day long single cars are being by cable hauled up one track loaded and sent down the other empty.

When received at the top of the slope the car is run into the breaker, where its contents are dumped into a chute. Men are stationed ready to do the uncoupling from the cable, to look after the cars as they drop their load, and to see that they are returned.

In this, as in everything, in fact, about a coal mine, clockwork-like system prevails.

As it is received from the car the coal is in great chunks, mixed with slate and dust, just as it was loaded by the miners. It falls a few feet to a platform, where half a dozen men with picks tackle it.

The big pieces of slate are at once sent rattling down an incline to the bottom of the breaker, where they are carried to the dump.

The coal is attacked with picks and broken into more manageable masses, when it is also started on its long and tortuous journey through the breaker.

From then on, however, it is broken by machinery, the various sizes being sorted automatically. At every turn as it comes slowly down the chutes the slate pickers' busy fingers are at work at it.

The boys, for embryo-miners generally do this work, seem to know intuitively what is slate and what is coal. They appear to do their work mechanically. The slate in each case is thrown into a chute and carried to join its kind which started off at the beginning.

Machinery also helps to sort the coal and slate. The apparatus is called a jigger. It consists of a big tank filled with water, into which the coal and slate are dumped.

The water is violently agitated and on the principle of placer mining, the slate being heavier sinks to the bottom and is carried off, while the coal being lighter comes to the top and is secured.

Finally, after it has been pounded, broken, washed, sorted, picked and repicked, the coal reaches the bins at the bottom and is ready for the cars.

The slate, dirt and debris generally is run off on cars and dumped, forming the mountainous culm banks which are so conspicuous in the coal regions.

Reaching the mountain side at the top of the breaker, the guide led the visitor to the shaft which the men use in descending into the mine.

The mine inspector seated himself carelessly in the car while his companion grasped tightly with both hands an iron bar which conveniently stretched from side to side. Then the signal to drop was given.

Te cable began to pass out. Soon the opening was a mere star of light. Then it was a speck and finally it faded from view and the journey down the rest of the gently sloping shaft was made in the light of the two lamps.

It was an uncanny journey. The heavy wooden pillars lining the sides of the track flitted by like spectres. Water at places dripped copiously from the walls and roof.

At others the chilling, fearful sound of a running stream greeted the ears. Now and then, especially in passing the deserted 500-foot level or gangway, the boom-like report of falling coal or beams could be heard.

All the while a cold air rushed up the shaft to greet the riders and cool the brow which was inclined to be feverish from the mental calculations which went on inside as to the probable results should the cable snap or the car jump the track. A rattle and a jolt told of the journey's end in safety.

Imagine a spacious corridor seven miles long with its accompanying branches, and you have and idea of the second level or gangway of the colliery.

At the usual five and a half feet, however, great logs stretch across the roof resting on the uprights. It would take an immense weight to crush in these supports, but that this is no uncommon occurrence newspaper readers well know. It is, though, one of the minor dangers of the mines.

The level is always broad enough to accommodate one car track, while in places it is wide enough for two or more. Utter darkness reigns, save where the light from a miner's lamp shines for a foot or two around.

Often at the sides of the tracks are gutters of inky-black water heavily charged with the strongest acid. Of course no drinking water is to be had in mines, and the men must bring it in in the morning in their tins the same as they do their dinners.

Not unfrequently tunnels through the solid rock were encountered, which served to connect the gangways. At the sides Granger's lamp shed the light while he pointed out the seams of coal, and in places the wedges of rock as it separated the veins.

It brought into view the strange growths of plant life which clung to the coal, while his sure feet and strong arms helped the visitor over stones and beams where a misstep meant a plunge into a repulsive gutter.

He knew all the ghost-like forms which went by, and cheery greetings always passed.

Climbing a crude ladde, guide and visitor crawled on hands and knees into a small dark opening some seven feet from the floor. At the end it was barely possible to sit upright. Two miners were at work with dynamite. The perspiring novice began to chill at once.

"Oh! there's no danger in dynamite," laughingly remarked one of the workmen. "Cut me a piece of it," he said to the other man, who coolly took off about two inches from a stick of the explosive. "See, there's no danger there. It'll even burn," and the man's jackknife chipped off a slice, to which he applied the flame from his lamp. It burned with a little splutter.

"Now, here is the danger," continued the wag, as he thrust a slender dynamite cartridge into his mouth. "If I closed my teeth hard on this the top of my head would go off and you'd get hurt, too." His statement was not controverted.

"Show him how the charge is prepared," suggested the guide. Then the unknown placed the small piece of dynamite in the hole he had picked, sunk his cartridge in that, stuck a one-minute fuse in the end of the cartridge and plastered the opening nicely, while the guide remarked that if his visitors would retire to the gangway the man would light the fuse and follow.

The explosion came on schedule time, as the group stood in the level, and the guide explained that some tons of coal were to his credit, per consequence.

It would be impossible to describe here all of that four hours' experience.

Space might be taken to tell in detail of the visit to a breast through an opening like that to the battery, only three times as long and up an inclined plane, where it was impossible to get much above a crawling position, and where loose coal packed and slipping coal dust and intense heat made the passage most difficult, so that the investigator wanted to retire when half way up, but was enthused by his companions.

The struggle up ended in the breast where Michael McGinley and James Barrett were breaking away coal from the immense vein. The space was that of a good-sized room.

The small passages, as well as the big ones, it must be remembered, must all be shored with heavy timber, and the miners must carry it there and set it so firmly that there is no fear of concussion throwing it down.

In fact, wherever the miner goes heavy timbers must be dragged and set in position, proportionate in size to the hole he excavates.

Space will not permit even a brief description of the wonderful system of ventilation, by which a complete circulation of air from the surface above is made to reach the innermost corners of the mine at all times.

Nor the manner in which the three fire bosses search the colliery throughout every morning before the men go to work to see that no dangerous gases are lacking to cause those dreadful calamities which only too frequently horrify the world.

Nor of the engine-room blasted from the solid rock, in which there is pumping facilities for throwing off 3,000,000 gallons of water daily.

Nor of the comfortable stable where are housed the 27 mules, who never see daylight except when they are sick or the mine shuts down; nor of the boiler house at the entrance to the mine, where 36 huge boilers furnish steam power for the colliery.

Nearly 700 men are employed in this mine.—Philadelphia Call.

A STRIKING FEATURE

Of our Carpets is the phenomenal figures at which we are selling them. There isn't any other name for these figures—they are phenomenal. They are figures that make figures of speech superfluous. It is almost always the case that, as the temperature goes up, prices go down. We are not responsible for a fall in prices. If you know anything of values, if you know what is as good as two good things usually are, if you know an unparalleled opportunity when it comes your way, you won't make any mistake about seizing this one and seizing it in a hurry.

GREAT MEN USUALLY UGLY.

"Isn't it strange that nature made her great men so unpardonably ugly?" queried S. T. Leathe, as he turned a portrait book of celebrities in the corridors of the Lindell. "Take the whole lot, from Socrates to Bismarck, from Palestratus to Patrick Henry, and there is not half a dozen men who rose to real greatness who could, by the boldest exercise of poetic license, be called handsome. Byron was, probably, one of the best looking of the lot, and he had a club foot, was mentally deformed and morally depraved. Burns was a fine looking fellow, but he is one of the minor great—cannot be classed with the world compellers. Voltaire was excusable for being in bad humor with his Creator. He looks as though one of 'nature's journeymen' might have made him. Our own Henry Clay was so homely that he had to use the horse trough for a mirror, and Lincoln had no use for an 'amorous looking glass.' It is strange, too, how few great men look the part. I have wasted a great deal of time studying physiognomy. It is a rank humbug. I defy any man to tell a marshal of France from a dancing master, a United States senator from a barber, the most profound philosopher from a footman, the intellectual hierarch of earth from a feather-headed nincompoop, if they are all dressed alike and will keep their mouths shut. The chances are that the lesser men will look the greater. I remember being at a table in the Astor house, New York, when a gentleman entered who was an almost exact counterpart, so far as personal appearance went, of Daniel Webster, the shape of the head and face was the same, the expression much alike. I was profoundly impressed, and resolved to make his acquaintance. I did so, and found that for years he had conducted a dark-alley saloon in the oil districts, until a lucky strike made him a man of wealth, but left him mentally where it found him—but little better than a fool. No, you cannot judge a book by the cover, but you will generally find that the showiest covers are put on the most worthless books.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SHE CURED HIM EARLY.

"When I was 30," remarked an old fellow of 70 to a lot of youngsters, who were narrating their domestic experiences, "I married a belle of the county, and she was a lively one, I tell you. She was about 25 and had a convincing way with her that was a caution. I had been one of the boys and she knew it, but that didn't hold her back a bit. We were in love with each other, and she was willing to run all the risks. For the first three months I did very well, and then I began to stay out just a little later than before, and still a little later, but Hattie never said a word. One night I got in about 3 o'clock and, as usual, she was asleep, and I crept in without disturbing her, though I was three hours later than any time I had got in since I was married. The next morning Hattie was as bright as a dollar."

"What time did you get in last night, Tom?" she asked at breakfast.

"Oh, along about midnight," I replied evasively.

"Worse than that," she laughed.

"Maybe it was a little later," I confessed.

"It was about 3, wasn't it?" she asked, with the air of a person who knew what she was talking about.

"Oh, no, not quite so bad as that," I hastily protested.

"It must have been, Tom," she insisted, for it was half past 2 before I got in, and I was dead asleep when you came."

It was my time to make a few remarks then, but I didn't make them. I confessed to 3 o'clock, and from that day to this I've been in by 9 o'clock, and I don't know yet whether she was fooling me or not. Good night. It's a quarter to 9." and the old man walked out.—Detroit Free Press.

TO CHANGE AMERICA'S NAME.

"If the American people want to do a gracious thing, let them make the great quadro-centennial celebration of the anniversary of the discovery of the continent the occasion for changing its name to Columbia," said F. M. Hoskins, at the Southern yesterday. "Why should it not bear the name of its discoverer instead of that of an old adventurer and map maker? All of the nations of the western hemisphere will be represented at the world's fair. Let them be authorized by their respective governments to get together and make the change official. Thenceforth we will have North, South and Central Columbia, instead of North, South and Central America. Thenceforth we will be Columbians instead of Americans—take our name from the foremost man of the fifteenth century, instead of from one of the small fry who followed in his wake. In no way can we so honor Columbus as by taking his name; in no way can we so fittingly rebuke fraud and humbuggery as by tearing the ill-gotten laurels from the brow of that old accident, Amerous Vespucius. It is true that a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, and that nomenclature cannot add or detract one jot from the greatness of the western world; still we would not call a fragrant flower by a name that had become synonymous with putrefaction, nor should we longer permit out great country, which we boast is heir of all the ages and foremost in the files of time, to longer wear a cognomen that was forced upon it by fraud, and which is suggestive of honors unearned, of the brows of heroes despoiled of the bays to deck the head of a brazen humbug. Let us be Columbians."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

OUR GREAT COUNTRY.

Do you know that very few of us realize what a great country ours is? Listen.

The United States is eighteen times as large as Spain, thirty-one times as large as Italy, and sixty times as large as England and Wales. It is three times as large as Great Britain and Ireland, France, Germany, Australia, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Denmark and Greece all put together. Our rivers and lakes contain one-half the fresh water on the globe. We can travel up the Mississippi and Missouri rivers 3,900 miles, or as far as New York is from Constantinople.

We can crowd into the space occupied by the United States, not including Alaska, the countries of Great Britain and Ireland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Austria, Holland, Belgium, France, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Italy, Greece, European Turkey, Palestine, Japan and China. Should there be a great famine all over the world we could raise enough wheat to supply all with food.

It would require six countries of the size of Greece to cover the two Dakotas. Texas is nearly as large as the entire continent of Europe, not including Russia.

AN AUSTRALIAN MYTH.

The Story of Two Brothers and a Bunyip.

Ask a native what a bunyip is, and he will look at you with amazement. It is simply beyond him, says a writer in Belgravia for September. Some stories, however, have been handed down from generation to generation, in which the monster is given a practical form. In one of them he is depicted as a gigantic black man arising out of smoke, not unlike the genii of the Arabian Nights, in another it takes the shape of a huge hippopotamus living in marshy swamps, where it lies in wait, and should it succeed in seizing an unfortunate gin who has ventured too near its haunt, it hurries away with its prey in its mouth to devour her at its leisure among the slime at the bottom of the morass. It is evidently one of this latter sort to which the following tale refers:

Long ago two brothers, one tall and the other short, went to a swamp near Mt. William to get swans' eggs. They found a great many, and while roasting some of them on the bank of the lagoon, the smaller of the two brothers said he must get some more from the swamp. The taller one forbade him to go alone. However, he would go. He found a nest in the middle of the lagoon and took the eggs. When returning to the shore he heard a rush of water behind him and saw the water fowls hurrying as if frightened. At the same time the bottom of the marsh became so soft that he stuck in the mud and could not go forward. A great wave overtook him and carried him back to the nest, where a large bunyip caught him in its mouth. It held him so high that his brother saw him.

Some hours afterward the water became calm. The tall brother then took a sheet of bark and put a fire on it, and approaching the nest, saw his brother in the mouth of the bunyip.

Speaking to the bunyip, he said: "Be quiet and let me take my brother." The bunyip gnashed his teeth and gave him up, but he was dead, and his entrails had been devoured. The brother took the body ashore, laid it near the fire, and wept sorely. He then went for his friends, who came and carried the corpse home. After he had watched it for two days, the relatives put it in a tree for one moon and then burnt it, with the exception of the leg and arm bones, which were given to the friends of the deceased.

THE VARIOUS DOZENS.

The child is taught at school that a dozen means twelve every time, but when the child grows into a man he finds that a dozen is a very elastic term. A baker's dozen is thirteen, and is a publisher's or a news agent's in many parts of the world. In some sections a dozen of fish means twenty-six, and there are other anomalies of this kind. But to find a dozen indicating anything from two to fifty it is necessary to go to the earthenware trade. Here the size and weight of articles decides how many make a dozen, and in jugs, bowls, plates and so on there are two, four, six, eight or more to the dozen. A dozen composed of twelve articles is a very unusual thing in the wholesale pottery trade, and as a result there are few clerkships more difficult to hold than in this line. I tried the work once, and failed ignominiously. To have to find the cost of 500 articles at so much a dozen, when that dozen may mean anything, is a very difficult task until a man gets thoroughly used to it. That it is easy then, I have been told, though I never got used to it sufficiently to know of my own knowledge.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HOW NOT TO DRINK.

The only beverage I drink is champagne. I have experienced considerable trouble in getting my friends to understand why I now confine myself to this expensive drink, but my leading supporters now understand it and fully approve of it. The reason is plain and simple. Perhaps no less than 500 men call on me a day. At least one-fifth of the number insist on me dropping my work to go out and drink with them. To refuse many of them point-blank would be giving them an actual insult and turn them from me the next time I run for office. I remark, however, "No, thank you. I have just had a small bottle and that is all I drink now," which causes them to hesitate a long while before insisting. Very few men want to pay $2 for chapagne when 10 cents for beer will answer the same purpose of sociability. By adopting this rule I keep sober and am in condition to do my work at all times. I advise all men similarly situated to adopt it. It saves health, money and reputation.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"I LOVE THE WOODS."

I love the woods.
Oh, give me but that crag of rock
On which to build my simple cot,
And I'll not ask for palaces,
Nor murmur at my lonely lot.

I do not need the silken garb,
The cushioned couch, or seasoned food;
I do not need the tongue of men
To voice the word that "Life is good."

I do not need the amber scent,
The honeyed smile and tutored song,
Or crowd of glittering sycophants
That in the halls of Croesus throng.

I love the woods.
When o'er the distant line of hills
The rosy morning peeps its head,
And stars that through the night have watched,
Now quench their light and go to bed.

I rise from couch of perfumed pine
And seek the purling brook that flows
Between its fringe of velvet moss,
Where tiny turquoise blossom blows.

I need no marble fountain rare
To purify and lave and clean,
And when I say my grateful prayer,
'Tis in His mighty dome of green.

I love the woods.
My silent friend, my faithful dog,
The horse that hastens to my call,
The birds that sing above my head—
They constitute my all in all.

I breathe the forest's filtered air,
The breeze that cools the mountain brow,
The snow-clad summit's atmosphere,
And praise the Lord I'm living now!

I love the woods.
—Richard Mansfield, in Harper's Weekly.
